then additional deputy commissioner, Hafizullah Shah, the then assistant commissioner revenue and Ghulam Hassan Rather, the then tehsildar.

It is alleged that the land encroached upon by Mohiuddin belonged to the Forest Department which had raised objections to its regularisation under the Jammu and Kashmir State Lands (Vesting of Ownership to Occupants) Act also known as the Roshni Act.

The J-K administration had filed the review petition on December 4 for modification of the nearly twomonth-old judgment stating that a large number of common people would suffer unintentionally, including landless cultivators and individuals who are themselves residing in dwellings on small areas.

It said there was a need to distinguish between the common people and the wealthy land grabbers among the beneficiaries, and it favoured that landless labourers or those with one house in personal use be allowed to keep the allotted land under the Roshni Act.

The Supreme Court on Thursday had asked the Jammu and Kashmir High Court to decide the pleas seeking review of the October 9 verdict scrapping the Roshni Act which had conferred proprietary rights on the occupants of the state

A bench headed by Justice N V Ramana considered the oral assurance of Solicitor General Tushar Mehta, who appeared for the Jammu and Kashmir administration and said that no coercive action will be taken against those petitioners who have approached the top court in the matter as they are not "land grabbers or unauthorised people".

The Roshni Act was enacted in 2001 with the twin objective of generating resources for financing power projects and conferment of proprietary rights to the occupants of state land.

During the hearing conducted through video-conferencing, the bench said that to avoid conflicting orders, the petitioners should go to high court for review.

"All petitioners should approach the review bench and all of them should be heard by the high court. We will direct accordingly," the bench observed.

The Roshni Act initially envisaged conferment of proprietary rights of around 20.55 lakh kanals (102,750 hectares) to the occupants of which only 15.85 percent land was approved for vesting of ownership rights.

On November 1, the Union Territory administration cancelled all land transfers that took place under the Roshni Act.

According to the high court order, a total of 6,04,602 kanals (75,575 acres) of state land had been regularised and transferred to the occupants. This included 5,71,210 kanals (71,401 acres) in Jammu and 33,392 kanals (4174 acres) in the Kashmir province.

According to the order, complete identities of influential people, including ministers, legislators, bureaucrats, government officials, police officers and businessmen, their relatives or persons holding benami for them, who have derived benefit under the Roshni Act, will be made public within a period of one month. "Secretary PDD said that Mohra HEP shall be taken up for construction by J&K Power Development Corporation and the work is expected to be allotted as early as March 2021," he said.

Earlier in the day, he said, the Principal Secretary also reviewed in detail the power scenario of two remote districts of Kupwara and Baramulla and issued directions to the engineering staff to streamline the power system and remove the difficulties by taking additional

"He called upon all the officers to ensure that there is proper and swift mechanism in place for replacement and repair of damaged transformers and that damaged transformers are replaced immediately from the buffer stock kept available in all districts . He also emphasized that the damaged transformers must be repaired at the designated departmental workshops in the quickest time possible. Instructions were given for quick transportation of damaged transformers from Districts to work shops twice a week to replenish the buffer stock and improve the turn- around and repair time of transformers. In order to improve the schedule of repair of damaged transformers, he also sanctioned two trunk-mounted cranes one each for Kupwara and Sopore," he said.

The official spokesperson further said that Kansal also gave directions to augment the capacity of District level workshops so that 400KVA transformers are also repaired without referral to the Central workshop. He also stated that the overall objective of the department is to minimize the power outages during winters so that the people do not face inconvenience.

"Reviewing the progress of ongoing works, the Principal Secretary, asked the engineers to complete all ongoingprojects under languishing projects head by Feb 15, 2020. He also directed that the projects under DDUGJY and PMDP Urban must be completed by end of March 2021 in all towns and immediately handed over to the distribution corporation for installation of meters in these towns to achieve the target of 100% metering," he added.

Kansal, as per official spokesperson, also instructed the department functionaries to attend to the grievances and demands of general public received through the call-centre set up by the Power Development Department.

"The meeting also reviewed the venue realization in the twin districts and the engineers and other field staff were directed to improve revenue realization and to take action against wilful defaulters.Instructions were given for improving billing efficiency and taking action for non-payment of dues against habitual offenders,"

'We have been told that students would themselves be responsible for any lapses on this front so they are advised to make sure adequate backup is in place. How is it possible to arrange uninterrupted electricity at a time when the people across Kashmir have been witnessing frequent power cuts. Besides, there is no high-speed internet here," he said.

Sameer said the students have been told that laptops are mandatory for the examinations and the mobile phones will not be allowed for appearing in the examinations.

"It is just highhandedness of the varsity officials, nothing else," he said while appealing to the authorities at varsity to fulfil the demands of students from J&K.

According to Divisional Commissioner Kashmir, PK Pole high-speed internet facility was already available at various places. "But still if the students have concerns in this regard, they should approach me so that I would look into the matter," he said.

Meanwhile, two major mainstream parties National Conference and Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) criticized Jamia Millia Islamia for its decision to conduct on-line exams

"The announcement of the university to go for an on-line examination is incognizant of the ground realities in J&K, where 2G internet speed and frequent clampdowns on the internet service are common. The guidelines that students would be responsible for ensuring electricity and internet for the complete duration of the test and the students would be responsible for any lapses on that front, are elitist in nature defeating the inclusiveness that JMI stood for since its inception," NC President Farooq Abdullah said.

Echoing similar views, PDP Chief Mehbooba Mufti said that the announcement of holding online exams was problematic for students of Jammu and Kashmir.

"Jamia University's decision to hold exams in proctored online mode which requires laptops & high speed data for 3 hours is

Unbeknownst to them, Zarqa dialled

I was quiet, mulling over her words, noticing how my own mind nodded fervently back. She was right. We needed to teach them. We needed them to understand. This could be a matter of mere life or die by suicide. and we needed to do our best as middle-women in the battlefield.

all that matters." And so, our journey began.

Hizb steps in as Huriyat leaders bicker

Observer News Service

RINAGAR: Hizbul Mujahideen on Tuesday asked separatist alliance Hurriyat Conference (APHC) to muffle the internal dis¬cord which has emerged since India declared a unilateral cease-fire in Kashmir.

Hizb urged leaders of the APHC, an alliance of social, political and religious groups, not to "sling mud" at each other. Hizb statement came after several members of alliance criti¬cised one of their leaders, Abdul Ghani Lone, for issuing a state¬ment against non-Kashmiri militants. Lone, viewed by New Delhi as a key player in initiating possible peace talks over Kashmir, said that foreign militants fighting alongside Kashmiri militants against Indian rule in Jammu and Kashmir could not take part in any political dialogue.

"In present circumstances, the Hizbul Mujahideen does not doubt the sincerity of Hurriyat leaders and requests them that they should not sling mud at each other and doubt each other's intentions," Hizbul Mujahideen said.

"Hizbul Mujahideen urges leaders of Hurriyat to be cautious while issuing statements," it added.

Cracks within Hurriyat surfaced during a seminar on human rights in Srinagar at the weekend. The meeting erupted in acrimony with supporters of foreign militants and Lone sup-porters exchanging body blows. Many lower rung Hurriyat activists including former chair¬man, Syed Ali Shah Geelani, openly criticised Lone for issuing statements against "foreign militants" fighting Indian security forces in Kashmir. Sowing division: Indian troops stopped offensive operations against separatist militants for the Islamic holy month of Ra¬madhan from November 28. Most militant groups, which India says are supported by Pakistan, have rejected the temporary ceasefire. However, Hizb which is dominated by local Kashmiri fighters rather than Muslim warriors from different countries gave a less strident response to the Indian initiative. Analysts had said at the time of the ceasefire announcement that New Delhi could be trying to sow division within the ranks of Hurriyat to gain the upper hand. Latest developments show that if that was the strategy it may have worked. While Geelani dubbed India's suspension of hostilities a sin-ister move to sabotage Kashmir's freedom struggle, other Hur¬riyat leaders have spoken more optimistically of a possible breakthrough in the decade-old insurgency.

Kashmir based major regional parties who oppose erasure of J&K autonomy have banded together to take on the BJP. This has made the election into a contest between the BJP that repealed the autonomy and the PAGD that wants it restored.

Battle for DDCs

The election will broadly determine and define the contours of the post-Article 370 politics of J&K

RIYAZ WANI

-The significance of the DDC polls is beyond the debate about boycotting the exercise. Being the first election to be held following the repeal of Article 370, it has become a veritable popular referendum on big political questions about the region he way the BJP has gone about the ongoing District Development Council polls in J&K, the exercise for the party seems no less important than an Assembly election. The major BJP leaders have been deployed to the region to campaign - Mukhtar Abbas Naqvi, Shahnawaz Khan, Smriti Irani, Anurag Thakur have travelled far and wide to address election rallies. The home minister Amit Shah has also weighed in by framing the election as a battle between nationalist and anti-national forces, the BJP's favourite electoral trope. He called the People's Alliance for Gupkar Declaration (PAGD) «a gang", a label that is since being reiterated by other BJP leaders.

On the other hand, the PAGD has accused the administration of preventing its candidates from campaigning. The PDP leader Mehbooba Mufti has tweeted videos of her being barred from leaving her house to campaign.

This offers a telling glimpse of the post-Article 370 Kashmir. The DDCs have been introduced to create a new elected system of governance at the district level. But far from strengthening the grassroots governance the arrangement is out to dilute the powers of the Panchayats and Block Development Councils (BDCs). Also, given the way they have been constituted, the DDCs are certain to undermine the authority of a future Assembly too.

Being directly elected, the DDCs are required to exercise the complete authority over the district. This makes them like mini-assemblies. And going by the number of the districts, there will be twenty of them in J&K. The party which controls them will control the union territory. It wouldn't matter much which party controls the Assembly, considering the fact that an MLA will have no sway over a DDC, despite being its member. The new rules have given him no role in the election of the DDC chairperson and vice chairperson or in their removal. The divergence will be starker when the MLA and the DDC chairperson are from different parties. They will, in all likelihood, work at

True, the DDCs are supposed to be development centered but this in no way shall detract from their conspicuous political function. A party or an alliance that wins the majority of the DDCs will see it as a vote for its political ideology. much like the party in an absolute majority in the Assembly would. The DDCs are also electorally more important as its members will be more closely in touch with their constituents.and in a better position to address their grievances. So, a party not in control of the majority of the DDCs will find it exceedingly difficult to dominate the Assembly.

As far as the mainstream politics, contesting and winning the DDC polls will thus be a pre-requisite to making a mark in an Assembly election. This should explain the PAGD's decision to take part in the ongoing exercise, ignoring a significant section of opinion in the Valley that would have wanted the grouping to boycott. And this should also explain why the BJP is deploying all its resources to corner a larger share of the DDCs.

Much is at stake - again in the realm of the mainstream politics. This politics operates within a pro-India framework. Expecting boycott from the PAGD is to apply a yardstick reserved for the separatist struggle. In the worldview of mainstream parties, boycotting an election enables the other parties - in this case the BJP - to poach upon their workers and as a consequence erode their support base. This, in turn, is believed to weaken the cause the mainstream politicians stand for. Mehbooba Mufti said as much in his recent interview to a newspaper. So did Sajad Lone, another top PAGD leader.

The significance of the DDC polls, at the same time, is also beyond the boycott debate. Being the first election to be held following the repeal of Article 370, it has become a veritable popular referendum on big political questions about the region.

Kashmir based major regional parties who oppose erasure of J&K autonomy have banded together to take on the B.IP. This has made the election into a contest between the BJP that repealed the autonomy and the PAGD that wants it restored. This includes the Congress which is in a loose seat-sharing alliance with the anti-BJP political grouping.

If the BJP loses the election as the popular mood in the Valley and in the significant parts of Jammu would tell you, it will be an unequivocal popular disapproval of the August 2019 decision. This will certainly have big ramifications as a win for the PAGD would vindicate that the constitutional changes were made without the consent of the local population.

But it is too soon to write the BJP off. The slick electoral machine that the saffron party has become over the past six years have been enabling it to win polls independent of its performance and contrary to what the people at a place think of it. This was once again proved in recent Bihar election where the BJP did well in areas with a large concentration of migrant workers who lost jobs during Modi government's badly implemented lockdown and who had to walk hundreds of kilometres to their homes from various parts of the country.

In J&K, there's a predominant majority of people who are deeply aggrieved by the loss of autonomy - and this includes a major chunk among the BJP's non-Muslim support base in Jammu. So normally the BJP should do poorly in the DDC polls. But will it? It looks unlikely as of now. The party, as is the known fact now, goes to any extent to mobilize the public opinion in its favour: it runs a loud, aggressive campaign, uses media of all kind to set the discourse, deploys now time-honored diversionary and divisive rhetoric to create an alternate reality where fear and hatred reigns. This obscures the real issues. Elections are held in a manufactured environment favourable to the BJP. The party has deployed the same tactics in Kashmir and more: the PAGD has accused it of denying it the level playing field by not letting its candidates campaign freely.

So, it will be really interesting to see which party or the alliance takes the majority of the DDCs. much riding on the face-off. The election will broadly determine and define the contours of the post-Article 370

Stop listening to Obama

the Police', but, you know, you lost a big audience the minute you say it." The quote above is taken from an interview the former United States President Barack Obama gave to Snapchat show Good Luck America. If there must be leaders - and leaders on fairness – they should not be men who once presided over an imperialist state. There is no fairness in drone strikes, deportations and detention, the attempted felling of democratically-elected leaders or being the chief caretaker of colonial land theft and the institutional violence that renders Indigenous and Black populations at the greatest risk of succumbing to poverty and police violence. It is problematic for the former presi-

f you believe, as I do, that we should be able to reform the criminal justice system so that it's not biased and treats everybody fairly, I guess

you can use a snappy slogan, like 'Defund

dent to perform the role of communication sage when his own sloganeering of "hope" and "change" did not prove sufficient to meet the hopes for an end to torture and deaths in custody. Or change in any satisfactory way discriminatory systems of punishment and civil asset forfeiture. Or stymie the efforts of the succeeding, less racial-equity-minded administration to resume a killing spree on death row via the resumption of federal executions or the deliberate mismanagement of a pandemic that disproportionately kills non-white people.

Problematic, too, is associating activists' articulation of a programme to immediately divest from and incapacitate a classist and historically anti-Black institution with a marketing strategy. Far worse, however, is Obama's work to reinforce the myth that campaigns for Black survival must, first and foremost, work to present themselves in the best light to invite wider society. Wider society is the problem.

If all Black movements adjust their language as Obama suggests we should, there would be no record of our truth. nor our fundamental and passionate disagreement with the state of things. Unadulterated radical Black imagining and voicings of a future free from anti-Blackness would be erased from history. The only record we would have of our dissent is sheepish pleadings to a racist society, sanded down to fit inoffensively into fragile liberal ears.

There exists no audience that would be roused from the edges of their seats by a clever, well-crafted motto. None who were not already elbowing their way to the front lines of struggle as soon as they heard about George Floyd, or Atatiana Jefferson or the Zong massacre. It is not so much that our demands risk losing a big audience, as the big audience window-shops our struggle. We have entirely too much faith in the revolutionary will of those who respond to the ten-thousandth racist murder with "it is so sad".

Obama, himself, admitted that he was the kind of person who read Frantz Fanon and Gwendolyn Brooks not for what they meant to our lives but to pick up women. In this, he models the fleeting, parasitical interest in the intellectual labour of Black radical thinkers that is not always convertible to useful activism.

One wonders if Toni Morrison might have wriggled out of their photographed embrace if she knew Obama may have sprayed the CliffsNotes of her novels on himself like cheap cologne.

The great white whale of support for Black lives will always prove elusive. Polls have shown that the increase in support for the uprising against racist killing is a chimera, vanishing almost as soon as it becomes measurable. Those genuinely affected by George Flovd's death in a life-changing way are now radical and will not be turned away by what may feel to some as a too-angry chant or too impractical demand.

Those, on the other hand, who were pushed by the swell of a crowd forced to sit and watch an eight minute and 46-second killing so nakedly discriminatory it debilitated, for a moment, their go-to excuses of "bad apples" and see-through calls for retraining, are now relievedly ebbing away with that crowd back to their settled places of faith in "America, the fundamentally good". To devote one's talents to the work of getting them back is a fool's errand.

Instead of appealing to the people who can always stomach a bit more anti-Black state violence, it may be better to rally those who have had enough. Those who are not moved due to the efficacy of slogans but by their disgust with institutionalised and constantly legitimated white supremacist violence.

Liberal support is not indispensable to the cause of Black freedom. In fact, liberalism is one of the most effective tools in keeping Black liberation at bay. It glorifies waiting peacefully for justice. Not even dogs are asked to sit during their abuse.

And it is liberals Obama has in mind when he speaks about a potential audience. As a man who has had his effigy lynched and is called an American-hating terrorist more than any person alive, he knows better than most that conservatives do not come around no matter how much deference is shown, how many times magnanimity is performed, or how many times a Black hand reaches across to "the other side"

Maybe slogans designed to save our lives should not be designed, primarily, for others. Maybe direct and forthright statements have longer longevity, provide better comfort and inspiration to those they are intended to serve than the ones watered down to please an audience ambivalent on the question of justice.

The black glove-fisted chants of "Black Power" may, in the end, prove to have done more good for the cause of freedom than "keep hope alive". Maybe #landback addresses a specific injury, agitates for material reparations, and is a necessary cutting through the colonising culture that trained its young to sing "this land is your land, this land is my land".

The bugle has sounded but the liberal reinforcements are not coming. Instead, they have pretty much carried on with their lives save the occasional nod to the phrase "the country is going through a racial reckoning". A phrase that suggests the demand for "accountability" is the equal and opposite reaction to a hemisphere's half a millennium of anti-Black asphyxiation.

It is not clear how we would arrive at a criminal justice system that treats everybody fairly in a country where half of the electorate voted for the re-election of a white supremacist administration. Some of these 73 million are senators, wardens, police union presidents, security guards, judges and correctional officers. It is no more likely that they are interested in an equitable society than yesterday's segregationists and confederates whose monuments they fight to preserve.

Revolutionaries, when they are white, are held up as models by politicians like Obama. Even when their "snappy slogans" are a good deal more aggressive, polarising and threatening than "Defund the Police". Patrick Henry's "Give me liberty or give me death!" was likely not warmly received by British loyalists and yet he is praised.

Obama's implication that substantial change only comes about after a doorknocking campaign and recruitment from those who have shown a passing interest in Black survival is not supported by historical evidence. It is a nationalist myth. One that shouts we are in this together as one American people instead of bearing witness to society as it is: a concatenation of local struggles, warring classes and interests, historical patterns of discrimination, and an entrenched and popular disinterest in justice for Black people

The liberals are not coming. Their war horses will never leave the stable no matter how flowery the invitation. We would do well to stop listening to Obama and get on with the business of uncompromising struggle for freedom

How Will My Divorce Affect My Kids?

KIM HALFORD

Children of divorce do a little bit worse on educational attainment, have slightly more behaviour problems, and are slightly more likely to suffer from anxiety and depression.

minority of children of separated parents have long-term problems, which can affect them through their childhood and into adult life. But it's conflict between separated parents, and not the separation itself, which accounts for many of the problems children of separated parents experience.

Immediately before and after parental separation, children are often upset. But for most children, their adjustment improves across the next year or two. Studies show most children adjust reasonably well in the longer term.

On average, children of separated parents do just a little bit worse than children of parents in intact families. This effect is evident across multiple outcomes. For example, children of divorce do a little bit worse on educational attainment, have slightly more behaviour problems, and are slightly more likely to suffer from anxiety and depression.

While the average effect of parental separation is small, children of separated parents have twice the rate of serious mental health problems and substance abuse, and are twice as likely to attempt suicide, as children of parents in intact families. These statistics reflect that a minority of children from separated parents have very poor adjustment.

The strongest predictor of poor child adjustment after separation is conflict between the separated parents. Poor long-term outcomes for children occur when parental conflict is severe (such as verbal abuse or physical violence), is frequent, and occurs in front of the child.

Children are particularly affected when the conflict is about them, or issues around parenting. Many children blame themselves for parental conflict, particularly when the conflict is about parenting or child behaviour. If the child believes they have caused the conflict, or should be able to stop the conflict, then they are particularly likely to suffer adjustment problems.

Severe parental conflict in front of the children is also associated with child adjustment problems in intact families. In high conflict parental relationships, separation sometimes reduces children's exposure to parental conflict. So staying in a relationship does not necessarily protect children from parental conflict.

As well as parental conflict, poor child adjustment is predicted by mental health or substance abuse problems in a parent. Many separated parents re-partner and these new relationships sometimes end. Frequent changes in the child's living arrangements, and changes in who cares for the children, are also associated with poor child adjustment.

Children are particularly affected when the conflict is about them, or issues around parenting.

When parents separate there has to be an agreement about how the children will be cared for. Agreements have to address issues such as where the child will live, how much time each parent will spend with the child, and how and where the parents will communicate about parenting decisions.

About 30% of separating parents reach a co-parenting agreement without assistance. Another 30% seek advice from professionals such as family lawyers, psychologists, or family counsellors, and then negotiate an agreement acceptable to both parents. But about 40% of separated parents have disagreement about parenting arrangements they're unable to resolve.

If mediation does not produce an agreement, then the parents can apply to the Family Court to make a decision. In some circumstances, the parents can go straight to court without having to attempt mediation. Examples of such circumstances are if there is family violence, or if one of the parents has a mental health problem that is seen to make mediation inappropriate.

Family mediation usually involves four or five hours of sessions with a professional mediator. Typically the mediator conducts a separate individual interview with each parent to assess the family background, and identify the current issues of dispute around parenting. There might also be a session talking with the child or children asking them their views. Then there would be a conjoint session between the mediator and the two parents.

Of separated parents who undertake mediation, about two-thirds reach a co-parenting agreement. The remaining third usually go to the Family Court to have a judge or magistrate determine what the parenting arrangements will be.

As most parents will realise, parenting arrangements need to change as children's circumstances change. Parenting agreements need to allow for decision-making as new circumstances arise, and to be renegotiated across time. For example, a child who usually stays weekends with her mother might get interested in a weekend sport that occurs near her father's home, and the child might want to change around where she spends her weekends.

Due to the ongoing nature of coparenting, separated parents often have contact with each other for 20 or 30 years after they separate. Developing collaborative co-parenting can be challenging for separated parents. If separated parents allow conflict to occur in front of their children, the children suffer. If parents manage to be mutually respectful and keep their child's best interests as their shared focus, then the child is likely to do well

Numerous services are available to assist separated parents to develop more effective co-parenting. These include parenting education, counselling, and legal advice.

Why our Sense of Time is So Skewed by the Pandemic

ell, we're less than three weeks from the last day of 2020, New Year's Eve is three weeks out, and I'm wondering if I made any resolutions last year that I've misplaced along the way. I also wonder how many of us are already thinking about New Year's Resolutions this year. What do you hope to see happen in the coming year? What do you hope to do better – or at least different? We've all had a year to reflect on what we want to accomplish in 2021 – and much of our hopes may simply be the delayed hopes for 2020.

A year ago, none of us had even heard of COVID-19 and it was on New Year's Eve that the very first official case was reported and the news raced around the world.

Mid-March, though, brought a "twist" that many of us never imagined – naively, many of us probably believed that the world was safe from the virus and our medical experts would have what it takes to stop the spread before it reached our shores. And if New Year's Eve 2019 seems like a million years ago or just yesterday, I get it.

After nine months of this strange form of suspended animation, time has become harder than normal to pin down. Without the regular interactions and comings-and-goings that are standard fare of normal daily routine, our brains become challenged to anchor themselves in the day, the week, or even the month. When everyday feels like "blursday," weekends aren't much different from weekdays, and all those summer months inside were a lot like winter months inside. Keeping time has become such a taxing challenge for our stressed out mental bookkeeping systems.

Usually, the older we get, the more quickly time passes. With each advancing year, the days fly by faster and major holidays seem to show up sooner every year. But for younger folks, waiting 365 days between birthdays seems like an eternity. That's because our brains use novel experiences to "slow down time," so to speak.

As we age, we experience increasingly fewer new experiences, so time speeds merrily along. For kids, though, every day is a new adventure so time advances more slowly and just meanders along its course. The relativity factor also plays a role – by 45, you've experienced over 16,000 days. Eight-year-olds haven't experienced 3,000 yet. One day to a 45-year-old is a blink of an eye compared to a day to a child.

So while age shortens the days and youth lengthens the months, the pandemic totally upended even that expectation. The older we are, it's been found, the slower we have felt time to be moving since the pandemic began.

The more frustration and stress we've felt during the past nine months, as social engagements and time with others has diminished, the longer the days have become, as well.

It's the younger ones among us who are experiencing a "fast forward" sense of time perception now. Many people who were already using virtual means of social connections didn't feel quite the same disruption as others when quarantine and isolation periods were mandated

The lack of comings and goings in the real world seemed to move time along faster with days flying by – "What, it's already Friday? I thought yesterday was Monday," some might wonder. Time is definitely a relative construct.

However, virtually all of us have had our time perceptions skewed by the shift in routine during the last nine months. Our chronological anchors have all been unmoored and we all seem to be feeling that Monday is Thursday, December is July, and backwards is now forwards.

That's all ironically normal.

So, before you begin to count down the days left in this ridiculous year, you might as well accept that you'll likely lose count before you are halfway done.

Use of social media linked to developing depression: Research

Voung adults who increased of depression. However, initial decomparison may also underlie these their use of social media were pression did not lead to any change findings. "Social media is often cusignificantly more likely to develop depression within six months, according to a new national study authored by Dr Brian Primack, Dean of the College of Education and Health Professions and professor of Public Health at the University of Arkansas.

Compared with participants who used less than 120 minutes per day of social media, for example, young adults who used more than 300 minutes per day were 2.8 times as likely to become depressed within six months.

The study, which will be published online December 10 and is scheduled for the February 2021 issue of the American Journal of Preventive Medicine, is the first large, national study to show a link between social media use and de-left us with the chicken-and-egg guestion," said Primack.

"We know from other large studies that depression and social media use tend to go together, but it's been hard to figure out which came first. This new study sheds light on these questions, because high initial social media use led to increased rates in social media use," added Primack.

In 2018, Primack and his colleagues at the University of Pittsburgh sampled more than 1,000 U.S. adults between 18 to 30.

They measured depression using the validated nine-item Patient Health Questionnaire and asked participants about the amount of time they used social media on platforms like Facebook, Twitter, Reddit, Instagram, and SnapChat.

Their analyses controlled for demographic factors like age, sex, race, education, income and employment, and they included survey weights so the results would reflect the greater U.S. population.

"One reason for these findings may be that social media takes up a lot of time," said Dr. Cesar Escobar-Viera, assistant professor of psychi-"Most prior work in this area has atry at the University of Pittsburgh and co-author on the study.

"Excess time on social media may displace forming more important in-person relationships, achieving personal or professional goals, or even simply having moments of valuable reflection," added Escobar-Viera.

"This can be especially difficult for young adults who are at critical junctures in life related to identity development and feel that they can't measure up to the impossible ideals they are exposed to," Sidani added.

The findings are of particular importance given that depression was recently declared to be the leading global cause of disability by the World Health Organization and accounts for more disability-adjusted life years than all other mental disorders.

"These findings are also particularly important to consider in the age of Covid-19," Primack said.

"Now that it's harder to connect socially in person, we're all using more technology like social media. While I think those technologies certainly can be valuable, I'd also encourage people to reflect on which tech experiences are truly useful for them and which ones leave them feeling empty," added

Now edit Office documents directly from Gmail attachments

Google has announced a new integration of Gmail with Microsoft Office files to allow users to directly edit documents that they receive in attachments.

Now one can edit Word, Excel, and PowerPoint files without ever leaving Gmail, and while maintaining the document's original file format.

"Starting today, you can also open Office files for editing directly from a Gmail attachment, further simplifying your workflows. For example, when you receive a Word document as an email attachment, you can open it and start editing in Docs with a single click while still preserving the Word file format," the company said in a statement.

With the new change, Microsoft Office attachments will have a new "edit" option and when edits are complete, there will be a new option to share the document via email.

The update is rolling out to users now, although Google says it may take up to two weeks before it shows up for everyone. Google is also working to help ensure that Office files work more smoothly in Google Docs, with the launch of a new Macro Converter add-on for Google Workspace. -Agencies

Bhartiya Kisan Union has moved an intervention application in the Supreme Court challenging the recently enacted three farm laws, which has led to major farmers protests at various Delhi borders.

The plea, moved by farmers' union presi-

Services Act, 2020, the Farmer's Produce Trade and Commerce (Promotion and Facilitation) Act, 2020, and the Essential Commodities (Amendment) Act, 2020.

The plea said: "These acts are illegal and arbitrary, because, these acts would pave way for cartelisation and commercialisation of the ag-

The plea has argued that the new farm laws are unconstitutional and anti-farmer and these laws will make farmers position vulnerable to corporate greed of multinational companies. these laws were passed in haste.

The plea said the farmers are indeed afraid that the corporate houses will twist and turn words to wind them in an unfavourable contract just like money lenders. "And feelings of the farmers are that it would be very hard for a farmer to always understand the ramifications of the contract that he is signing", added the plea.

The plea argued that the amendment to the essential commodities act would facilitate black marketing and these new laws attack the very foundation of the agriculture fabric of the nation. "That without agriculture produce market committee acting as a protective shield around the farmers, the market would ultimately fall to the corporate greed of multinational companies who are more profit "oriented" and have no care for the condition of the poverty-stricken farmers which are many times coming on the stage of starvation due to natural calamity", added the plea.

The apex court had decided to hear pleas of RJD MP Manoj Jha and DMK Rajya Sabha MP Tiruchi Siva, and one by Rakesh Vaishnav of Chhattisgarh Kisan Congress against the three farm laws.

Doctors of AIIMS, other hospitals join IMA call for protest with black ribbons

The IMA has given a call for withdrawal of non-essential and non-COVID services between 6 am and 6 pm on Friday

NEW DELHI: Many doctors at several hospitals in the national capital, including AIIMS, on Friday sported black ribbons in support of the protest call of the IMA against the Centre's move allowing post-graduate practitioners of Ayurveda to be trained in performing surgical procedures.

The Indian Medical Association (IMA), which had given the nation-wide call on December 1, has demanded withdrawal of the notification.

Doctors at AIIMS, and various Delhi government-run facilities, including LNJP Hospital, Rajiv Gandhi Super Speciality Hospital, DDU Hospital, GTB Hospital, BSA Hospital, Sanjay Gandhi Memorial Hospital, and civic-run Hindu Rao Hospital performed duties while wearing black armbands and ribbons.

Resident Doctors Association of AIIMS-Delhi, in a statement said, "This step will not quackery, but also undermine the safety of public. We request the government of India to retract this notification immediately".

"We stand with our medical fraternity in this regard and support the strike called by Indian Medical Association," it said.

Shivaji Deb Barman, president of FORDA, an apex bodies of various RDAs in Delhi, said, doctors in Delhi will observe black ribbon protest, but "will not withdraw any services".

The IMA has given a call for withdrawal of non-essential and non-COVID services between 6 am and 6 pm on Friday to protest against the notification.

The notification by the Central Council of Indian Medicine (CCIM) to allow legal practice of surgeries by Ayurveda practitioners and the formation of four committees by NITI Aayog for integration of all systems of medicine will only lead only encourage already rampant to "mixopathy", the IMA has said.

Mr Deshmukh made the announcement on

"Bhima-Koregaon case accused Gautam Navlakha denied spectacles by jail authorities as they refused to accept parcel sent by his family," Mr Deshmukh said in the tweet.

"I have ordered an inquiry in this matter. I believe this situation should have been handled humanly & such incidents need to be avoided in future," he added. Gautam Navlakha's family members had on Monday claimed that his sent by his family through

On Tuesday, observing that humanity is most important, the Bombay High Court had referred to the alleged theft of Mr Navlakha's spectacles inside the prison and called for the need to conduct a workshop for jail officials to sensitise them on the needs of prisoners.

A division bench of Justices SS Shinde and MS Karnik said it had learnt about how the spectacles were stolen inside the jail and the prison authorities refused to accept the new spectacles
