Centre Justifies Kashmir Internet Blockade In Supreme Court

When I meet any of my six grandchildren, I often wonder what India will be like when they reach my age, which will be around the end of this century. I'm sure they will have been tremendous progress in many fields, but there are two areas that I find particularly worrying. The first is the continuing environmental degradation and global warming, which are creating serious problems. The air we breathe and the waters of our rivers have become highly polluted and unless this trend is reversed, we will face serious and widespread health problems in the years and decades to come.

The Death Of An Idea

Kashmiriyat

Kashmiriyat has not risen to alarming level but there has been a steady increase in recent years, with the number of incidents of violence and insecurity rising. The situation is particularly worrying in the Jammu and Kashmir region, where the conflict has been going on for more than 70 years. The Indian government has taken several steps to address the situation, including the creation of the Jammu and Kashmir Development Council and the appointment of a special representative. However, the situation remains tense and the prospect of a lasting peace is still elusive.

Centre Cites Mehbooba’s Inflammatory Speech In SC

Kashmir Times Editor Anuradha Gokhale, representing the Centre, submitted a copy of an inflammatory speech by Mehbooba Mufti, former Chief Minister of Jammu and Kashmir, before the Supreme Court on petitions filed by Kashmiri leaders and representatives of various organizations. The Centre cited the speech as an example of the government's efforts to maintain law and order and prevent the spread of terrorism.

Rajasthan and Srinagar cities, which is a matter of concern. It is responsibility of the Ministry of Environment, Forests and Climate Change, and the concerned authorities to address this issue. The government has already taken several steps to combat pollution, including the introduction of stricter emission standards and the promotion of renewable energy. However, much more needs to be done to ensure that the air we breathe is clean and healthy.

Since the recent dramatic changes in Jammu & Kashmir, Imran Khan has in every speech ended up by making an all-out threat of a nuclear war. We may dismiss this as bluster, but he did get elected prime minister of a country with nuclear bombs, and therefore, we have to take his threats seriously. Earlier reports that Pakistan is developing tactical nuclear weapons which could be used in a ground war are disturbing and add to the possibility of a catastrophic conflict.

The next year, he wrote a song about the plight of Kashmiri refugees. Many messages from Kashmiri refugees poured in and he empathized to grieve for them. He gave them all the same response: "I am deeply regret your whatever happened, and I would love to have a conversation with you. I am from Kashmir - we have been through this before. I have been to your region, and I empathize to grieve for you. You guys are respected.

It was an instance of how potent social media could be in Kashmir. Also in 2010,Burhan Wani, a teenager from Tral in South Kashmir, left home to join the Hizbul Mujahideen. Over the next few years, when security forces were providing support for a new phase of local militancy in the Valley (as opposed to militants coming in from across the border).

It is nothing short of tragic that the world refuses to take Imran Khan's threats seriously. The trigger for a conflict is bound to continue because of a fundamentalist ideology. These ominous words have always been there and unless this trend is reversed, we must expect a nuclear war. We may dismiss this as bluster, but he did get elected prime minister of a country with nuclear bombs, and therefore, we have to take his threats seriously. Earlier reports that Pakistan is developing tactical nuclear weapons which could be used in a ground war are disturbing and add to the possibility of a catastrophic conflict.
