When Dilip Kumar Visited Kashmir To End The 'Curse Of Childlessness'

Zaid Bin Shabir

A rotary-dial telephone rang the Rather residence of Dalgate amid the political rumblings of 1975. Srinagar was full of speculations and fearing political tensions, many high-end tourists had cancelled their bookings. But that call would confirm one quiet arrival in Gulmarg. The caller sounded akin to a quint-essential Kashmiri: "Please come back to Gulmarg. You're required to host Dilip Kumar and Saira Banu." Once the Dalgate man reached Gulmarg, he got introduced to a brutal reality that had forced the first Indian superstar and his wife to bow under the shade of the transcendental journey of Kashmir.

Ahad Rather, a former Deputy Director Tourism, turns nostalgic about

Mohammed Yousuf Khan aka Dilip Kumar. Abdul Ahad recalls the virtuous actor as a "worthy ambassador of honour", who would've given everything for the peace and tranquility that he once experienced in Kashmir. "This photo-frame is from the time when I came to know about the obscure but ethical man lying behind the garb of a superstar," Abdul Ahad recalls while pointing towards a specific photo from 1975. That year, after reaching Gulmarg, Abdul Ahad received another call, this time from the thespian himself: "Salam Ahad Sahib. It's me, Mohammed Yousuf. Can you please accompany us [Saira Bano and Dilip Kumar] to Baba Reshi?"

"I had no hunch that the duo wasn't going there to pay respect but for something more valuable and important, that maybe, except me no other individual knew about," Ahad made a disclosure of the secret shrine visit years later, on the demise of Dilip Kumar, at 98. Before the 1975 Indira-Abdullah accord would renew political tensions in the region, Dilip Kumar would usually spend his vacations with Saira Banu in Kashmir, frequently staying at Srinagar's Oberoi Palace, Pahalgam's Hotel Natarajan and Gulmarg's Highland Park. "Those vacations were usually planned in secret as Dilip Kumar wished for tranquility in Kashmir rather than the same buzzer of Mumbai that followed him ● More On P10

Pace Of Dialogue Unsatisfactory: Pak

'Abandon wullar barrage'

ISLAMABAD - As Pakistani and Indian officials continue discussions on various issues under the ongoing composite dialogue, Islamabad on Monday said progress towards resolution of issues between the two countries has not been in accordance "with what it had.

"We want a meaningful progress towards the resolution" of disputes with India to build a lasting trust between the two countries," Foreign Office spokesman Jalil Abbas Jilani, said at the weekly press briefing here.

On the upcoming visit off Pakistani and Indian Prime Ministers to the United States, he said it was a coincidence that both the leaders were visiting Washington this, month but added that they would be in the US on different dates.

"The United States like the rest of the world is interested" in the peaceful resolution of the issues confronting the two nations for bringing peace and stability in the region," he noted. Jilani said that after a long time there had been frequent high level contacts between the leadership of India and Pakistan, adding that these engagements gave hope of an early resolution of all outstanding issues, including Kashmir.

"We do want to proceed with people to people contact but issue of Kashmir needs to be resolved, otherwise "the trust level between Indian and Pakistan would not improve," Mr Jilani stressed.

When asked about reports that Pakistani diplomats were being harassed in- India, he said Islamabad had sought more details from its mission if New Delhi.

On the recent Indo-US defence pact, Jilani said Pakistan has conveyed its concerns over the "induction of sophisticated weapons to India.

"It will perpetuate an arms race in which Pakistan does not want to enter," he said, maintaining that it will remain a matter of concern for Pakistan. Elaborating reports on the grant of permission by the Ministry of Commerce to import certain goods from India, he said all such items would be allowed through the Wagah border.

Meanwhile Pakistan on Monday asked India to abandon too Wullar Barrage project over river Jhelum, saying it will restrict the flow of water which is against the provisions of the Indus Water Treaty. "Under the Indus Water Treaty, only 0.1 Million' Acre Feet (MAP) of water storage is allowed while the Indian project envisages a storage of 0.324 MAF, which is 32 times more than what the treaty allows," Jalil Abbas Jilani told the press meet He said "the Indian design contemplates construction over 'river Jhelum, while the treaty States that no man-made structure is allowed over the river. "The Wullar Barrage construction is therefore in violation of the Indus Water Treaty," Jilani, who visited New Delhi, last week as part of Pakistan's delegation which held talks with Indian water officials on the issue, said.

He said extensive discussions were held over two days which covered all the technical aspects related to the project

The 1960 treaty gives exclusive rights to Pakistan over three of the six rivers which flow from India - Indus, Jhelum and Chenab. On the Baglihar dam issue, presently being arbitrated by a World Bank neutral expert between Islamabad and New Delhi, Jilani said the two countries have agreed on a time schedule in a meeting held recently in Paris.

He added India has sent the data and documents related to the Baglihar dam to Pakistani experts who will study and substantiate their objections.

"Pakistani experts will inspect the site" in the first week of October before the joint inspection by experts of the two countries."

World Passes 4 Million Covid Deaths As Delta Variant Fuels Fresh Outbreaks

Agence France-Presse

GENEVA: More than four million people have now died of Covid-19 infections, the WHO said on Wednesday, as many richer nations prepared to loosen restrictions even as countries in Asia battle surging infections.

Indonesia has become a global hotspot, with hospitals having to turn away patients, authorities forced to import oxygen supplies and a record 1,040 deaths reported on Wednesday. "The world is at a perilous point in this pandemic," said WHO chief Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, calling the four-million figure an underestimate of the true toll.

He said some countries with high vaccination coverage were "relaxing as though the pandemic is already over", while others have seen sharp spikes in cases because of highly-transmissible variants and a "shocking inequity" in access to vaccines. Indonesia is one country being hit hard.

The government has expanded restrictions across the archipelago following earlier clampdowns on the capital Jakarta and some other areas. "We need to pay attention to the availability of hospitals," said senior minister Airlangga Hartarto.

The new restrictions apply to dozens of cities and extend across the vast nation of nearly 270 million people, which has been hammered by the highly infectious Delta variant that was first detected in India.

Delta-fuelled outbreaks have also led to the imposition of restrictions in Australia, including in its biggest city Sydney where lockdown orders on more than five million residents were on Wednesday extended by at least another week.

"This Delta strain is a game changer, it's extremely transmissible," said Gladys Berejiklian, premier of New South Wales state, of which Sydney is the capital.

Australia has largely kept its outbreaks in check since the pandemic began, but the government is under increasing pressure over the slow rollout of vaccines.

"It's still scary that the virus is out there," said Menno De Moel, 44, at a vaccination centre in Sydney where he was getting his first shot.

"Hopefully this is going to be the last lockdown, but on the other hand anything that is needed, needs to be done."

Olympic impact

The Tokyo Olympics, already delayed by a year, also remain plagued by coronavirus fears, with authorities and organisers trying to find ways to safely host one of the biggest sporting events in the world just over two weeks before it begins.

Officials announced Wednesday that the Olympic torch relay had been scrapped on Tokyo's roads to prevent crowds.

And with infections on the rise, the government is expected to extend restrictions this week that will likely affect the number of fans that can attend Olympic events.

But in London, the Euro 2020 football tournament's semi-finals and final are set to be held this week with 60,000 fans permitted at Wembley Stadium, despite Britain facing a new surge in infections.

Mass vaccinations, however, have stopped a resultant surge in hospital admissions or deaths.

Prime Minister Boris Johnson has announced the end of most virus restrictions, such as face masks and indoor social distancing, in England. Other UK nations -- Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland -- are moving more slowly.

'Obnoxious' anti-maskers

As some countries peel back Covid restrictions, the WHO sounded by alarm over a lack of funding to fight the pandemic.

It said Tuesday its global appeal for funding for coronavirus vaccines, treatments, diagnostics and equipment was still $16.8 billion short -- almost half its total needs.

Even in wealthier nations with successful inoculation programmes, authorities are wary of a resurgence and have kept some restrictions in place, such as the requirement for face masks on flights in the United States.

Iran Hosts Taliban Talks With Afghan Officials As U.S. Exits War

Iran is hosting talks between senior Taliban negotiators and officials from the Afghan government, as the militants make rapid territorial gains ahead of the complete withdrawal of U.S. forces.

The Taliban said its delegation was led by Sher Mohammad Abbas Stanekzai, deputy head of the movement's political office in Qatar, where months of formal peace talks between the Afghan adversaries appear to have stalled.

China Appoints New General To Head The PLA's Command Bordering India

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

Chinese President Xi Jinping's move promoting Xu Qiling to the rank of General to head the PLA's Western Theatre Command overseeing the Indian border makes him the third commander to head the force after standoff along the Line of Actual Control (LAC) in eastern Ladakh began in May last year.

Observers say General Xu's promotion has also sparked speculation over the fate of his predecessor General Zhang Xudong.

Xi, who is also Chairman of the Central Military Commission (CMC) -- the overall high command of the People's Liberation Army, promoted 59-year-old Xu to the rank of General -- the highest rank for officers in active service in China, state-run Xinhua news agency reported on Monday.

The promoted officers are Commander of the PLA Southern Theatre Command Wang Xiubin, Commander of the PLA Western Theatre Command Xu Qiling, Commander of the PLA Army Liu Zhenli and Commander of the PLA Strategic Support Force Ju Qiansheng.

While announcing the promotion of Xu to the rank of General, Xinhua in its report referred to Xu as the Commander of the PLA's Western Theatre Command suggesting that he replaced General Zhang.

Xu was appointed to head Western Theatre Command ground forces on June 5 last year.

Xu is the third General to head the Western Command after the eastern Ladakh tensions began in May last year.

General Zhang was appointed on December 19 last year to head the command amid the Ladakh standoff with India replacing Gen. Zhao Zongqi, 65, who retired.

Gen. Zhao headed the Western Theatre Command during the 2017 Doklam standoff where the Indian army stood up against the PLA plan of laying a road close to the Indian border in the area claimed by Bhutan. The Ladakh standoff also happened under the watch of Gen. Zhao.

Regarded as the rising star in the PLA, Xu was one of the young generals promoted by Xi after he took the helm of the PLA in late 2012.

India and China were locked in a military standoff at multiple friction points in eastern Ladakh since early May last year.

However, the two sides completed the withdrawal of troops and weapons from the North and South banks of Pangong Lake in February following a series of military and diplomatic talks.

The two sides are now engaged in talks to extend the disengagement process to the remaining friction points.

India has been particularly pressing for disengagement of troops in Hot Springs, Gogra and Depsang. According to military officials, each side currently has around 50,000 to 60,000 troops along the LAC in the sensitive high altitude sector.

There was no visible forward movement in disengagement of troops in the remaining friction points as the Chinese side did not show flexibility in their approach to this issue at the 11th round of military talks.

Russia Races Tom Cruise And Musk For First Movie In Space

Agencies

Six decades after Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin became the first human to orbit Earth, earning Moscow a key win in the Cold War, Russia is again in a space race with Washington.

This time though the stakes are somewhat glitzier.

On October 5, one of Russia's most celebrated actresses, 36-year-old Yulia Peresild is blasting off to the International Space Station (ISS) with film director Klim Shipenko, 38.

Their mission? Shoot the first film in orbit before the Americans do.

If their plan falls into place, the Russians are expected to beat Mission Impossible star Tom Cruise and Hollywood director Doug Liman, who were first to announce their project together with NASA and Space X, the company of billionaire Elon Musk.

"I really want us to be not only the first but also the best," Peresild told AFP, with the clock ticking down to the planned October 5 blast-off from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Kazakhstan.

The Call -- the Russian project's working title -- was announced in September last year, four months after the Hollywood project.

But apart from its grand ambitions, little is known about the film.

Doctor who?

Its plot, which has been kept under wraps by the crew and Russia's space agency, has been revealed by Russian media outlets to feature a doctor dispatched urgently to the ISS to save a cosmonaut.

Nor has The Call's budget been disclosed. But it's no secret that travel to space is a costly business: one seat on a Soyuz rocket to the ISS usually costs NASA tens of millions of dollars.

Hinting at the film's aesthetic direction, one big name on the credit list is Konstantin Ernst, the 60-year-old head of the overtly Kremlin-friendly Channel One television network.

Ernst has stage-managed some of the most important moments in Russia's recent political history and of President Vladimir Putin's career: military parades, inaugurations, the opening ceremony of the 2014 Olympic Games in Sochi.

Dmitry Rogozin, the outspoken head of Russia's Roscosmos space agency, will also feature when the credits roll in theatres throughout the country.

Trump Told Chief Of Staff, 'Hitler Did Good Things': Book

Agencies

The former US President Donald Trump has left the White House but he still manages to stay in the spotlight. This time, it is yet another book controversy.

In a recent revelation, Trump once told his then-chief of staff, John Kelly, that "Hitler did a lot of good things".

Since leaving the White House, Trump has been having a hard time deflecting the troubles coming his way in form of statements made by him and recorded by some journalist or writer.

This shocking statement has been recorded by Michael Bender of the Wall Street Journal in his new book titled, 'Frankly, We Did Win This Election'.

The incident, reportedly, took place while Trump was on a visit to Europe to mark the 100th anniversary of the end of the first world war. During a few relaxing moments, Kelly was explaining to Trump "which countries were on which side during the conflict" and "connected the dots from the first world war to the second world war and all of Hitler's atrocities".

This was when Trump insisted that Hitler "did a lot of good things". As per sources, quoted by Bender, Kelly was quick to dismiss Trump's statements and he "told the president that he was wrong, but Trump was undeterred". Trump, reportedly, justified his statement by stressing Germany's economic recovery during the 1930s under Hitler's rule.

"Kelly pushed back again," Bender writes, "and argued that the German people would have been better off poor than subjected to the Nazi genocide."

As per the book, Kelly stood his ground opposing Trump and told the former reality TV star "you cannot ever say anything supportive of Adolf Hitler. You just can't."

This incident took place at the same time when Trump had landed himself in trouble by allegedly calling US troops who died in the war "losers" and "suckers".

Trump has, however, denied all claims. The book, meanwhile, is due to release on July 13, 2021. Media organisation, the Guardian, has obtained a copy of the book in advance.

Barrage Of Rockets Fired At Airbase Housing US Troops In Iraq

Agencies

At least 14 rockets have hit an airbase in western Iraq that is hosting US and other international forces, slightly wounding at least two people, according to the United States-led military coalition in the country.

US Army Colonel Wayne Marotto, spokesman for the international operation, said in a Twitter post on Wednesday the rockets had landed on Ain al-Asad base in Anbar province and its perimeter.

"Two personnel sustained minor injuries. Damage still be assessed," he said in a later Twitter post, updating an initial statement of three minor injuries.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for Wednesday's attack.

The US accuses Iranian-backed militia groups of launching regular rocket attacks against its troops in Iraq.

Some 2,500 US soldiers are deployed in Iraq as part of an international coalition to fight the ISIL (ISIS) armed group.

"TWO PERSONNEL SUSTAINED minor injuries. Damage still be assessed," he said in a later Twitter post, updating an initial statement of three minor injuries.

They have been targeted almost 50 times this year.

The latest incident came two days after at least three rockets landed on Ain al-Asad, without causing casualties.

Iraqi military sources quoted by Reuters news agency said a rocket launcher fixed on the back of a mini-truck was used in Wednesday's attack and was found on nearby farmland.

On Tuesday, a drone attacked Erbil airport in northern Iraq, targeting a US base on the airport grounds, Kurdish security sources said.

American Airlines Delays Flight By A Day After 30 Students Refuse To Wear Masks

Agence France-Presse

WASHINGTON, UNITED STATES: An American Airlines flight from North Carolina to the Bahamas was delayed by a day after around 30 teenagers refused to wear masks, local media said Tuesday.

Flight 893 was scheduled for take-off from Charlotte Douglas airport late Monday but only left the tarmac on Tuesday morning, with the troublemakers still on board.

An initial delay of several hours was caused by mechanical problems, but when the plane was finally ready to leave arguments broke out between the crew and a group of youths who refused to comply with federal rules that all passengers must wear masks on board flights to fight the spread of Covid-19, local channel WSOC-TV reported.

"It was bad. First, they were yelling. They were cursing. They were being very obnoxious," witness Malik Banks told the station.

The group of around 30 teens were high school students from Boston celebrating their graduation. They ended up agreeing to wear a mask the next day, after spending a night at the airport. Police made no arrests, local media reported.

The incident reflected a general decline in civility on board planes, according to US carriers. Unions and industry federations last month called on the Department of Justice to take a more systematic approach to prosecuting violent incidents on board flights.

Since January 1, 2021, there have been 3,271 incidents involving passengers reported, including 2,475 linked to passengers refusing to wear a mask, according to a press release from the Federal Aviation Administration published on Tuesday.

Thousands Flock To See 23-Month-Old Dwarf Cow "Rani" In Bangladesh

Agence France-Presse

CHARIGRAM, BANGLADESH: Thousands of people are defying a nationwide coronavirus lockdown in Bangladesh to see Rani, a 51-centimetre (20-inch) tall cow whose owners claim it is the world's smallest.

The 23-month-old dwarf cow has become a media star with scores of newspapers and television stations throwing the spotlight on the tiny bovine at a farm near Dhaka.

Pictures of Rani on social media platforms have set off a tourist frenzy.

Despite a nationwide transport shutdown because of record coronavirus infections and deaths, people are flocking in rickshaws to the farm in Charigram, 30 kilometres (19 miles) southwest of Dhaka.

"I have never seen anything like this in my life. Never," said Rina Begum, 30, who came from a neighbouring town.

Rani is 66 centimetres (26 inches) long and weighs only 26 kilograms (57 pounds) but the owners say it is 10 centimetres shorter than the smallest cow in Guinness World Records.

M.A. Hasan Howlader, manager of Shikor Agro farm, used a tape measure to show dozens of onlookers how Rani dwarfs her closest rival Manikyam, a cow in the Indian state Kerala that currently holds the world record.

"People come long distances despite the coronavirus lockdown. Most want to take selfies with Rani," Howlader told AFP, adding Guinness World Records had promised a decision in three months.

"More than 15,000 people have come to see Rani in the past three days alone," he said.

"Honestly speaking, we are tired." Guinness World Records said Manikyam, from the Vechur breed, was 61 centimetres high in June 2014.

Rani is a Bhutti, or Bhutanese, cow which is prized for its meat in Bangladesh. The other Bhuttis on the farm are twice Rani's size.

"We did not expect such huge interest. We did not think people would leave their homes because of the worsening virus situation. But they have come here in droves," the manager said.

Sajedul Islam, the government's chief vet for the region, said Rani is a product of "genetic inbreeding" and was unlikely to become any bigger.

Islam said he had told the farm to restrict the tourist influx. "I told them they should not allow so many people to crowd the farm. They may carry diseases here that threaten Rani's health," he said.

Address fears

The delimitation commission, led by Justice (retd) Ranjana Prakash Desai is in Jammu & Kashmir on a four day visit to interact with political parties and officials for their inputs about redrawing new constituencies in the Union Territory. Except for the PDP, all other parties have chosen to meet the commission. The exercise, the PDP said, was pre-planned and aimed to realise the “political vision of a particular party”.

But the delegations of the other parties have met the commission. This includes the National Conference which until recently had boycotted it, terming the exercise illegal as it was as, according to the party, it stemmed from the revocation of Article 370 and the subsequent J&K Reorganization Act that was currently facing challenge in the Supreme Court.

In their interactions with the commission, the Valley based parties have expressed their apprehensions about the exercise. They have sought transparency in how the commission goes about redrawing the constituencies and which the commission has promised it would do.

A five-member delegation of the National Conference, the largest J&K party, that met the commission has told it that the exercise should have been undertaken after the assembly elections. The party also termed it as an “unconstitutional exercise” based on the Reorganisation Act, which has been challenged in the Supreme Court.

However the misgivings about the commission aren't limited to the political parties, the people at large have deep suspicions. They believe that the effort is geared to grant more seats to Jammu, something that would reduce the political weight of the Kashmir Valley in a future Assembly. And the commission should address such apprehensions.

Incidentally, the visit of the commission follows immediately after the much hyped meeting of the prime minister Narendra Modi with the J&K leaders. The meeting turned out to be more of an interaction of the PM and the home minister Amit Shah with the J&K leaders than an effort to resolve the issues currently facing the former state. Both the PM and the HM stayed true to their ongoing approach towards J&K. They were not inclined even to restore the statehood in the near term. Instead, the statehood would follow “at an appropriate time,” once the delimitation exercise has been completed and the elections within the union territory framework have been held. This could set the stage for the restoration of statehood. But no one is sure if the statehood to be granted would be full or a truncated one where the real power would vest in the governor.

It is in this context that the role of the delimitation commission assumes a profound significance. The outcome of the exercise has the potential to alter the political complexion of J&K.

An Uneven Field

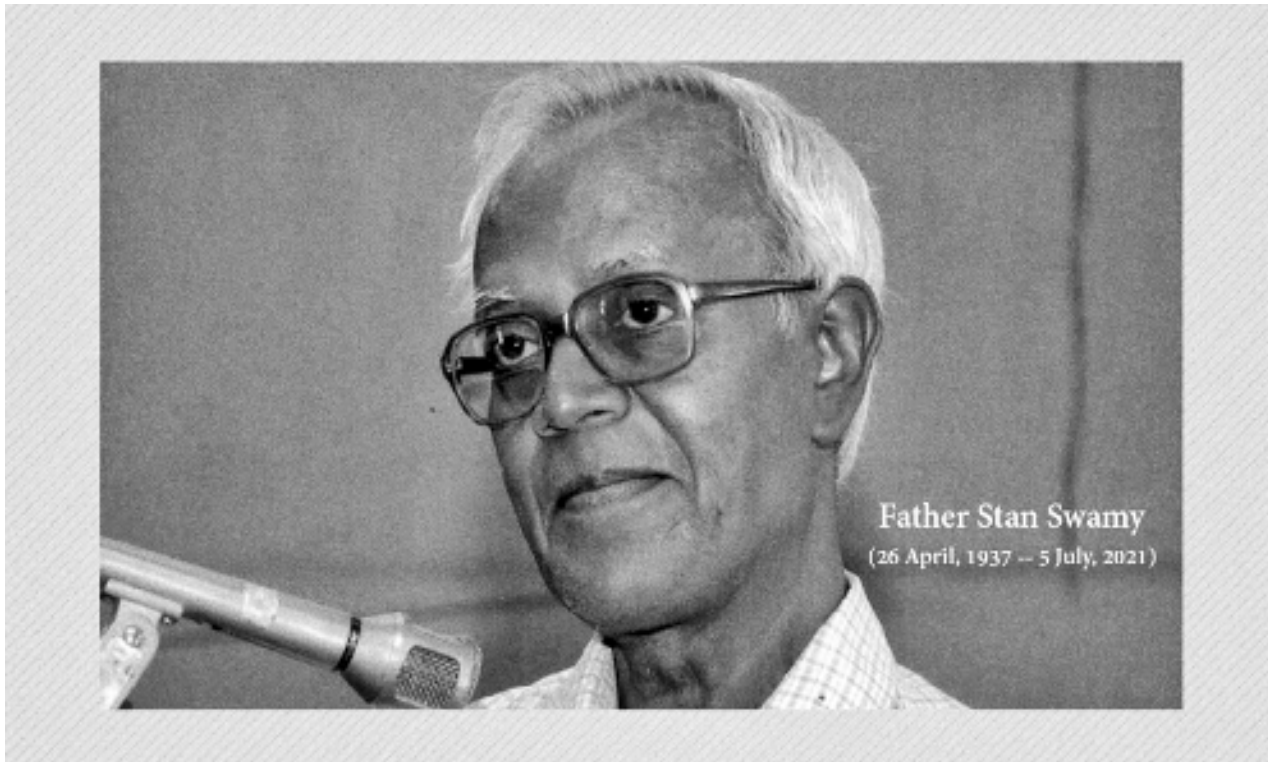

The government has argued that the draft e-commerce rules — on Monday, the ministry of consumer affairs postponed the deadline for comments and suggestions on the proposed consumer protection rules from the earlier target date of July 6 to July 21 — seek to protect the interests of consumers, curb unfair trade practices, and encourage free and fair competition. It goes without saying that measures designed to elicit greater cooperation from e-commerce firms, ensure greater responsiveness to issues of consumer welfare, are welcome. As such, rules that require the appointment of a chief compliance officer and a resident grievance officer to ensure that consumer grievances are settled in a timely manner are steps in the right direction. But the proposed rules also seek to harden considerably the regulatory architecture in the online retail space, restrict the room for manoeuvre that e-commerce companies have, and create more ambiguity over their operations, without imposing similar constraints on their traditional brick and mortar competitors.

There are specific points of concern. The draft rules call for putting in place a fall-back liability clause. According to this, e-commerce firms will be held liable in case a seller on their platform “fails to deliver goods or services due to negligent conduct” causing a loss to the consumer. But this raises a question: If an e-commerce firm exerts no sway over the inventory, then can it be held responsible for the actions of the seller? Similarly, there is also ambiguity over flash sales. The ministry first noted that “only specific flash sales or back to back sales which limit customer choice, increase prices and prevent a level playing field are not allowed.” While it later elaborated that it will not regulate flash sales, it is puzzling how sales limit consumer welfare. Where is the cost-benefit analysis? Another rule that deals with related party transactions has caused much consternation. Under this, related parties of an e-commerce platform cannot be sellers on that platform. Contrary to expectations, doing so would tend to limit, not enhance, consumer choice on the platform.

Considering that such restrictive rules do not apply to the brick and mortar stores, which engage in discounts, end of season sales, and special tie-ups with manufacturers, imposing such restrictive regulations on e-commerce platforms lends credence to the charge that the rules were designed giving greater weightage to the interests of traditional retailers, rather than consumers, or small and medium sellers on the platforms. Vagueness in some of the terms employed in the rules, which leaves room for discretion in implementation, also raises apprehensions of greater regulatory intervention. These concerns need to be addressed. Policy should aim to reduce information asymmetry, facilitate competition, and bring greater transparency in pricing. In trying to enhance consumer welfare, it should not end up decreasing it.

“Maharashtra’s Taloja Jail, where most of the Bhima-Koregaon detainees are lodged, is a crumbling jail that houses over 3000 inmates, although the jail has a capacity to accommodate only 1400 prisoners

The Elgar Parishad held in Pune District in January 2018, also known as the infamous Bhima-Koregaon meet that ended in violence, has seen its first casualty. On Monday, 84-year-old Stan Swamy breathed his last in Bombay’s Holy Family Hospital. Although reluctant to go to hospital, Swamy preferred the private Holy Family Hospital to the government-run JJ Hospital.

Swamy’s death has sparked outrage, both in India and abroad. The Congress’s Rahul Gandhi and the CPM’s Sitaram Yechury have called the death “state-sponsored murder”. The UN and the EU have condemned the death. The media too has come down heavily on the government for its cruelty to Swamy. Rajdeep Sardesai, Editor-in-Chief of India Today TV, said that the state has “blood on its hands.” Sreenivasan Jain of NDTV 24x7 believed that Swamy’s death was caused “by a combination of abuse of state power and judicial apathy.” He called the death “a failure of the criminal justice system.” Even former Supreme Court judges are appalled by Swamy’s death. Justice Madan B. Lokur, writing in The Wire, says, “The entire episode leaves behind a feeling that Stan Swamy was virtually thrust [with] a sentence of death, without charges being framed against him, and without a trial.” Advocate Vrinda Grover said, “The whole country needs to question Stan Swamy’s death; his work was against corporate interests.” Activist and economist Jean Dreze held, chillingly, that “the death was allowed to happen on purpose, to send a message to other activists.”

Soon after the Maha Vikas Aghadi took over the reins of the Maharashtra government in November 2019, the centre transferred the Bhima-Koregaon case from the Pune Police to the National Investigation Agency (NIA), fearing that the state government would go soft on the activists arrested in the case. Since then, the NIA has been consistently refusing bail to the activists, even though many of them have been struck with Covid and with other illnesses. Of the 16 activists arrested in the case, including Hany Babu, only one, the poet Varavara Rao, has been granted bail for a period of six months. Rao’s bail will shortly be coming to an end. Another activist, Gautam Navalakha, was given house arrest by the court in lieu of jail.

According to the NIA, the principal reason for refusal of bail to the activists is that they are “Urban Naxals” who have Maoist links. However, evidence from an independent US-based agency has shown that the alleged correspondence found in the computers of Stan Swamy, Varavara Rao, Rona Wilson and others, including a plot to assassinate Prime Minister Modi in a Rajiv Gandhi-style suicide-bombing attack, was actually malware planted in their devices to incriminate them. The activists have repeatedly denied any knowledge of how the 30-odd offending emails landed in their computers. In Swamy’s case, even searches conducted by the cops in his Ranchi office revealed nothing.

In a video released in October 2020, Stan Swamy said he was interrogated in jail for 15 hours over 5 days. He called his arrest a pogrom launched by the state to punish activists, poets, writers and students who dissented with the government’s policies. He said that of all the seditious emails attributed to him, only one innocuous email that he wrote to Sudha Bhardwaj, another activist arrested in the case, was genuine. All the other emails were manufactured. However, Swamy declared that he would not be a silent spectator to what went on in the country, and that he was ready to pay any price to put an end to the abuse of state power.

Indeed, the price Swamy paid was his life. The Bible says, “The wages of sin is death.” But Swamy died without committing any sin. On the contrary, he was a missionary and a Jesuit priest, who worked for the welfare of poor adivasi tribals in Jharkand State.

The very fact that Swamy was a Jesuit priest is enough to prove that he could not at the same time be a Maoist. Maoism is a radical Marxist ideology, and the Marxists abjure religion, with Marx famously calling religion “the opium of the people.”

Adivasis, incidentally, are invisible to the ruling dispensation, who only seem to have an eye for corporate giants.

Neither the Prime Minister nor the Home Minister have consoled Swamy’s death. Wouldn’t it have magnanimous on their part to spare a word for him, like so many others in civil society, even though his ideology was diametrically opposed to theirs?

Besides being inflicted with Covid, Stan Swamy also suffered from Parkinson’s Disease. His hands constantly trembled. The Bombay High Court observed that Swamy had a hearing problem. In Swamy’s own words, he could neither write nor walk, and had to be fed by others. Yet he was denied even a straw sipper by the Taloja Jail, where he was incarcerated.

Maharashtra’s Taloja Jail, where most of the Bhima-Koregaon detainees are lodged, is a crumbling jail that houses over 3000 inmates, although the jail has a capacity to accommodate only 1400 prisoners. The only in-house doctor in the Taloja Jail is an ayurvedic doctor. But the NIA, perhaps in order to punish the activists, has refused to transfer them to other, more hospitable jails, although many of them are seriously in need of medical attention.

Like Varavara Rao, had Stan Swamy been released on bail, he would have perhaps survived. Rao too has been stricken with Covid and has very weak eyesight. (So much so, he is unable to read the 50 poems written by him that Maithri and I have co-translated from the Telugu).

The draconian Unlawful Activities Prevention Act (UAPA) under which Swamy was arrested has a conviction rate of just 2%. Recently, the Delhi High Court granted bail to student activists Natasha Narwal, Devangana Kalita and Asif Iqbal, arrested after the anti-CAA Delhi riots of February 2020. Last week, the NIA Court also acquitted Akhil Gogoi, arrested under the UAPA. Yet, Justice V. K. Ayer’s view that bail should be the rule and jail the exception has not been followed in the case of most of the Bhima-Koregaon activists, none of whom has so far been convicted. Nor has the other view of the courts, that undertrials should be housed in jails close to their places of residence, so that friends and family can visit them, been followed in Swamy’s case. Even if Stan Swamy had to be jailed, he would have liked to be housed in a prison in Ranchi rather than in Maharashtra.

Alas, not just in life, but even in death, Stan Swamy hasn’t been taken to his beloved Ranchi. According to reports, his funeral will be held in Bombay itself.

I would like to end with a tweet posted by Youth Congress Spokesperson, Latoya Ferns:

Today, the flag in my heart flies at half-mast.

May Stan Swamy’s soul rest in peace.

Reach Out and Reconcile

It takes just a moment, or should one say, a conspiracy to spoil relations between communities. Given the recent events, it seems to be the case between Sikhs and Muslims of Kashmir. Several narratives have emerged, and the two communities are accusing each other of transcending the boundaries of harmony. Social media has become a platform for these narratives and counter-narratives. One tweet highlighted the historic wrongs done to Muslims by Maharaja Ranjit Singh, and another one raised the matter of lack of Muslim conversions in inter-religious marriages.

The unfortunate thing, however, is that the seeds of discord were sown by leaders for their political gains in Punjab. While some sane voices did emerge to reveal the real motives behind these macabre tactics of communalization and politicization of events, they mostly remained unheard. Thus, the forces of division, to a large extent, emerged victoriously.

Sikhs and Muslims have lived in harmony for decades in Kashmir. They share the history and pain of victimization at and in difficult times, they have stood by each other. In present circumstances, they need to build upon their legacy of solidarity and defeat the evil forces hoovering over Kashmir. They need to understand that tensions can emerge between different groups in any society, and matters can be resolved amicably. Acknowledging that few hearts might have turned soar after the recent events, but the path to reconciliation is open; reach out and reconcile. After all, Guru Nanak Ji had Mardana, a Muslim, as one of his companions.

Kashmiris on the tragedy king of Bollywood
Dilip Kumar's death at 98 in Mumbai

KO Web Desk

In the news of his demise that made silence envelop one-and-all in grief, many also reminiscenced Dilip Kumar's melodic hold on languages. Commenting on Dilip Sahab's poetic proficiency in urdu, Author Journalist Gowhar Geelani tweeted, "Yusuf Khan aka Dilip Kumar was an amazing actor. The manner in which he spoke Urdu. His pronunciation. His pauses. His dialogue delivery. Oh yes, his looks too (Yusuf)!"

A young Yusuf Khan in Peshawar set out to cross-over to the other side and unwittingly set his golden foot in Bambai, the city of dreams. The winds of magic of the place couldn't help but direct themselves to welcome the groom of Hindi film industry. Undoubtedly, he had more to offer to it than it could ever offer to him. Dilip Kumar is responsible for single-handedly metamorphosing the entirety of Bollywood's trend and traits in theatre. He brought to it his individuality and modernised it with his craft adding substance to shadows.

Perhaps, this explains why the name that glides from each tongue to mark the paragon of Hindi Film Industry, will always be Dilip Kumar. The indelible effects of his work on generations of mind is such that for many, cinema began with the defiant and doting Salim in Mughal-e-aazam (1960).

Inarguably, he brought together two nations split in enmity through the association he lent to both. Infact, his love did not just fade boundaries but also created a confluence of odd lovers. Kashmiris were never behind in expressing their adoration and adulation of the great Dilip Kumar. The thespian comes up in conversations of many octogenarians who had the privilege of hosting him at their shops and boutiques on the Residency Road. Infact, Saira Bano, hsi wife, recounts how she would often see him reading away his nights under a lamp in a cottage in Kashmir's Dachigam.

Therefore, understandably, his death at the age of 98, shook Kashmiris with grief as much as the rest. While many spent their morning hearing personal histories of people who had encountered him in real life, others took to the internet to partake in mourning his death and celebrating his life.

Author and historian Khalid Bashir Ahmad, commemorated the news, by sharing an excerpt from his book, "Kashmir: Looking Back in Time" recalling the raging popularity of Dilip sahab in Kashmir: "Dilip Kumar's films would run packed houses in Kashmir. As elsewhere, he had a huge fan following in the Valley. Even the re-runs of his movies would go houseful. Films like Devdas, Mughal-e-Azam, Naya Daur, Deedar, Aan, Leader, Dil Diya Dard Liya and Aadmi would keep on returning year after year to a huge response. In 1970, when Gopi was released at the Palladium for an All India premier, Lal Chowk wore a festive look with buntings and colour posters of the film fluttering everywhere, and a huge gathering of Kumar fans jostling each other to reach the ticket window. Dilip Kumar and his wife, Saira Banu, who was his co-star in the movie, also came to the Palladium to watch the film. They had a tough time to wade through the river of fans including men with long grey beards, dying to have a glimpse of their favourite actor or shake hands with him. "A beaming Kumar shook hands and exchanged pleasantries with some of them", recalls Javed Azar, a former resident of Amira Kadal"

With the song, "Shamay Gham ki Kasam, Aaj Ghamghee Hai Hum, Aa bhi Ja Meray Sanam", teasing him into grief, Journalist Peerzada Ashiq also took to social media to express his grief, "The thespian who stirred our emotional beings with his talkative pauses and silences is no more. Muhammad Yusuf Khan aka Dilip Kumar is a milestone of my childhood: As kid his 'Gopi' made me laugh, his act in 'Footpath' and 'Dastaan' made me grim for days together, in 'Karma' he left me agitated and 'Aan' changed the rules of romance", he said in a Facebook post.

In the news of his demise that made silence envelop one-and-all in grief, many also reminiscenced Dilip Kumar's melodic hold on languages. Commenting on Dilip Sahab's poetic proficiency in urdu, Author Journalist Gowhar Geelani tweeted, "Yusuf Khan aka Dilip Kumar was an amazing actor. The manner in which he spoke Urdu. His pronunciation. His pauses. His dialogue delivery. Oh yes, his looks too (Yusuf)!"

Mazdoor. Devdas. Naya Daur. Aan. Mughal-e-Azam. Kranti. Saudaagar. You name it. Rest in peace, Yusuf sahab!"

Engineer Malik Manzoor ul Haq gave everyone a sweet look into the past by sharing a vintage vignette captioned, "Innalilahi wa Innalilahi Rajaoan. Every soul has to taste death, Bollywood legend, Tragedy King from Peshawar to Bombay passed away. An old memory, Govt Medical College Srinagar, Kashmir 1964 Batch. My Uncle Dr. G.H. Malik hand folded on right side of Dilip Kumar"

Similar photos also made rounds on the internet which showed DK's Kashmir connection.

A rare picture from the National Conference archives showed Sher-i-Kashmir with Dilip Kumar. Shared by a twitter user, it is from Nyla Ali Khan's collection:

Speaking of NC archives, former Chief Minister Farooq Abdullah, in an interview with media fondly remembered his close association with Dilip Kumar and reiterated the love and willingness he showed towards Kashmir.

Former CM and senior congress leader also took to twitter and said, "Me and my wife are deeply saddened by the demise of Dilip Kumarji."

The legendary actor was a very close family friend and well-wisher.

I know that words are of little solace at such times. However, our heartfelt condolences to Saira Banuji. May Almighty give strength and courage to Sairaji to bear this irreparable loss.

We also pray for the eternal peace of the departed soul of Yousuf Sahib"

Recalling a PDP's Mufti Muhammad Syed's tete e tete with Dilip Kumar in 2015, Shakir Parray, a twitter user tweeted, "When Mufti Mohammad Sayed (then CM) met Dilip Kumar in Mumbai and urged him to shoot all the upcoming films in Kashmir, renowned cartoonist BAB wrote in his famous cartoon the next day as Wesye Gulan Aamaye Bahaar, Az Saale Antan Dilip Kumar"

Perhaps, the most fitting tribute to DK from Kashmir albeit a succinct was from RJ Nasir, who was able to capture the significance of the passing away of this icon. He tweeted, "Bollywood passes away. Rest in Peace Yousuf Sahab"

Study suggests smart tech is not making people dumber

“We're not solving complex mathematical problems with pen and paper or memorizing phone numbers in 2021”

Agencies

According to a new University of Cincinnati research by social/behavioural expert Anthony Chemero, while there are plenty of negatives associated with smart technology, there is also a positive side to it. "Despite the headlines, there is no scientific evidence that shows that smartphones and digital technology harm our biological cognitive abilities," says the UC professor of philosophy and psychology who recently co-authored a paper stating such in Nature Human Behaviour. In the paper, Chemero and colleagues at the University of Toronto's Rotman School of Management expound on the evolution of the digital age, explaining how smart technology supplements thinking, thus helping us to excel. "What smartphones and digital technology seem to do instead is to change the ways in which we engage our biological cognitive abilities," Chemero says, adding "these changes are actually cognitively beneficial." For example, he says, your smartphone knows the way to the baseball stadium so that you don't have to dig out a map or ask for directions, which frees up brain energy to think about something else. The same holds true in a professional setting: "We're not solving complex mathematical problems with pen and paper or memorizing phone numbers in 2021." Computers, tablets and smartphones, he says, function as an auxiliary, serving as tools that are good at memorization, calculation and storing information and presenting information when you need it. Additionally, smart technology augments decision-making skills that we would be hard-pressed to accomplish on our own, says the paper's lead author Lorenzo Cecutti, a PhD candidate at the University of Toronto. Using GPS technology on our phones, he says, can not only help us get there but lets us choose a route based on traffic conditions. "That would be a challenging task when driving round in a new city."

Chemero adds: "You put all this technology together with a naked human brain and you get something that's smarter...and the result is that we, supplemented by our technology, are actually capable of accomplishing much more complex tasks than we could with our un-supplemented biological abilities." While there may be other consequences to smart technology, "making us stupid is not one of them," says Chemero.

Continuous sleep loss has impact on mental, physical wellbeing

Agencies

The findings of a new study suggest that all it takes is three consecutive nights of sleep loss to cause your mental and physical wellbeing to greatly deteriorate. A new study published in Annals of Behavioral Medicine looked at the consequences of sleeping fewer than six hours for eight consecutive nights - the minimum duration of sleep that experts say is necessary to support optimal health in average adults. Lead author Soomi Lee, assistant professor in the School of Aging Studies at the University of South Florida, found the biggest jump in symptoms appeared after 42 per cent had at least one night of sleep loss, sleeping 1 and a half fewer hours than their typical routines. They recorded their mental and physical behaviors in a diary for eight consecutive days, allowing researchers to review how sleep loss causes wear and tear on the body. Participants reported a pile-up of angry, nervous, lonely, irritable and frustrated feelings as a result of sleep loss. They also experienced more physical symptoms, such as upper respiratory issues, aches, gastrointestinal problems and other health concerns. These negative feelings and symptoms were continuously elevated throughout consecutive sleep loss days and didn't return to baseline just one night of sleep loss. The number of mental and physical problems steadily got worse, peaking on day three. At that point, research shows the human body got relatively used to repeated sleep loss. But that all changed on day six when participants reported that the severity of physical symptoms was at its worst. "Many of us think that we can pay our sleep debt on weekends and be more productive on weekdays," Lee said. "However, results from this study show that having just one night of sleep loss can significantly impair your daily functioning." Data provided by the Midlife in the United States study included nearly 2,000 middle-aged adults who were relatively healthy and well-educated. Among them, levels unless they had a night sleep of more than six hours. About one-third of U.S. adults sleep less than six hours per night. Lee says once that becomes a habit, it's increasingly difficult for your body to fully recover from lack of sleep, continuing the vicious cycle of worsening daily well-being, which could impact one professionally. A previous study led by Lee found losing just 16 minutes of sleep could impact job performance. Her previous findings also show that minor sleep loss can decrease daily mindfulness, which is a critical resource for managing stress and maintaining healthy routines. Lee says the best way to maintain a strong daily performance is to set aside more than six hours to sleep every night.

How a virtual placenta could help with early detection of at-risk babies

Agencies

None of us would be here without our placenta, the remarkable fetal organ that nourished and sustained us before birth. But despite its importance, the placenta is among the least studied organs and we don't fully understand how it grows and functions. This is problematic, because in one in ten pregnancies, the placenta functions poorly, leading to pregnancy disorders such as fetal growth restriction (FGR), when a baby's growth slows dramatically or stops. Across Australia and New Zealand, this affects more than 30,000 pregnancies each year, and growth-restricted babies are four times more likely to be stillborn. Modern ultrasound imaging tools and new technologies such as fetal DNA testing in maternal blood cannot yet predict which pregnancies are at risk of fetal growth restriction until after the baby's growth slows down. To help improve early detection and prediction of at-risk pregnancies, we have developed a virtual placenta - a computer-based representation of the organ - by piecing together a wide range of clinical and laboratory data from pregnancies that go well and those that don't.

The placenta has several functions. It delivers nutrients and oxygen from the mother's blood to the baby, removes wastes from the baby back to mum, and produces important hormones that adapt mum's body to pregnancy. Maori have always understood its value, referring to the placenta as the whenua, which nourishes the baby as the whenua (land) nourishes the people. We know there are some important factors, including smoking, that can affect a baby's growth. But pregnancy disorders can occur in healthy women with no risk factors, and in a culture where mothers are often quick to blame themselves, it's important for women to know that growth restriction hardly ever occurs because of something they did or did not do. The most common way to estimate fetal growth is by a tape measure on mum's stomach, but the technique is only 10% sensitive, and even less so in patients who carry more body fat. More than half of the babies struggling to grow well are not detected before delivery.

Virtual organs to detect health issues

We need to do better at detecting fetal growth issues. The earlier doctors know these babies are at risk, the better. While treatment options are currently limited, doctors can monitor the pregnancy more closely and make informed decisions about when to deliver. This is not straightforward, as both the mother's and baby's physiology can change quickly in pregnancy, and we can't ask pregnant mothers to have more tests, or ultrasounds, or to undergo procedures that might put the pregnancy at risk (like using radiation in a CT scan). The virtual placenta allows us to look more closely at pregnancy without adding to the burden of tests an expectant mother needs to undergo, and without costing the healthcare system an excessive amount. Virtual organs, or indeed virtual humans, are not a new concept. For several decades scientists have been combining anatomical knowledge with the principles of physics to predict how changes in anatomy affect organ function. An example includes how changes in blood vessels affect how hard a heart has to pump to circulate blood around the body. Simple virtual pregnancy models have guided the interpretation of ultrasound since the start of routine use in pregnancy in the 1980s. Virtual clinical trials are also emerging where it is possible to experiment on a computer-based organ to predict outcomes before new treatments are trialled on real people. This reduces animal testing and the cost of clinical trials.

Earlier detection of problems

The placenta is like a dense forest of trees. The baby's blood vessels are inside the branches of these trees, while blood from mum's uterus flows around the outside. How blood flows in both these circulations is critical for good exchange. Only recently has technology allowed virtual placentas to include the detail of this blood flow and exchange, which can't be measured directly. This is allowing scientists to make strides towards understanding how features of the placentas that restrict a baby's growth show up in imaging like ultrasound or MRI. Finding cost-effective ways to predict and detect fetal growth restriction will go a long way to helping our smallest babies. Predicting which pregnancies are at risk in early pregnancy is especially important, as this is when the placenta is growing rapidly, and therapies delivered in early pregnancy are more likely to bolster placental function. For example, simple and safe therapies such as aspirin are effective at reducing fetal growth restriction, but only if started before 16 weeks of pregnancy. As we cannot predict FGR in early pregnancy, much of what we know about restricted growth in utero comes from studies in late pregnancy, and assessment of placentas after delivery. Applying our anatomical understanding of earlier stages of placental development allows us to virtually "turn back the clock" and consider early contributors to poor placental function, and how we can measure these by ultrasound. We hope to use this knowledge to develop new ways to predict at-risk pregnancies, so we can help prevent growth issues, and give all babies a better start to life. (The Conversation)

'Commercial video games could help treat mental health issues'

Agencies

Popular video games have the potential to provide low-cost, easy access, effective and stigma-free support for some mental health issues, researchers at Lero, the Science Foundation Ireland Research Centre for Software, have found. The team at Lero, a world leader in connected-health research, said video games could be used where conventional therapies are not available because of cost or location, or as an addition to traditional therapeutic treatments for depression or anxiety. Lero researcher Dr Mark Campbell said there is mounting scientific evidence supporting the efficacy of commercial video games to improve mental health outcomes after the team reviewed existing academic research on the impact of video games on mental health issues, particularly depression and anxiety. "It is worth considering commercial video games as a potential alternative option for the improvement of various aspects of mental health globally," Lero researcher Dr Mark Campbell said. Dr Campbell led a team attached to the University of Limerick's Health Research Institute and Physical Education & Sport Sciences department to publish their latest research paper Gaming your mental health: A narrative review on mitigating depression and anxiety symptoms via commercial video games in academic journal JMIR Serious Games.

Dr Campbell said commercial video games are freely available or available for a one-time relative low cost and there are an estimated 2.7 billion video gamers worldwide. "The overall accessibility and pervasiveness of commercial video games within modern society positions them as an invaluable means of reaching individuals with mental health disorders, irrespective of age and sex, and with limited access to mental health care, particularly relevant during the current COVID-19 pandemic," he said. Lead author on the paper Magdalena Kowal explained how Virtual Reality (VR) video games have great potential in treating mental health issues. "These are well-suited for the implementation of cognitive behavioural techniques for the treatment of depression and anxiety disorders in the future. Given the immersive nature of VR technology and the controllability of the virtual environment, it could be particularly well-suited for use in exposure therapy," she said.

Shahid Afridi Says It Has Become Too Easy To Play For Pakistan

Press Trust of India

KARACHI: Former Pakistan captain Shahid Afridi feels playing for the national team has become way too easy and the players should only be picked after spending at least a couple of seasons in domestic cricket.

Speaking at a function, Afridi hit out at the selection policy adopted for the national team for red and white ball formats.

He was particularly critical of the way players were changed and debuted in the Pakistan white balls squads.

"It has become so easy to play for the national team whereas in the past playing for the Pakistan team was the ultimate for any professional cricketer," Afridi said.

He said the pathway into the Pakistan team had become so easy that even players with little domestic cricket exposure were rushed into the side and then dropped and shunned in the same way.

"That is why our performances are not consistent with the amount of cricket we play in Pakistan."

The popular all-rounder felt that each player must be given at least two or three years exposure in the domestic circuit before he is considered for the national squad.

"Why have we made it so really easy for players to represent their country. I am sad to see that a player gives one or two good performances in domestic cricket or the PSL and he is in the national team."

"What is this? You should make your cricketers play domestic cricket," Afridi said.

Afridi felt that batsmen and bowlers needed at least exposure of two to three years before selectors could judge their talent, temperament and ability to cope with pressure.

"The real difference playing international cricket is how strong a player is mentally to handle all the pressures that come in international matches and that includes the criticism and glare of the media and fans.

"We must now judge the difference between just talent and mental strength of a player," Afridi added.

The former captain said that when a player appears in domestic cricket for two or three years, selectors and coaches get a chance to judge his temperament. He also called for the selectors and coaches to not shun players after a few chances if he failed to perform.

"If you give a chance to a player and he doesn't perform, he should be sent back into domestic cricket. Don't make playing for Pakistan so easy. Players must know the value of international cricket. I am totally against players coming into the side on just one or two performances," he added.

Angelo Mathews Opts Out Of India Series As Players Sign Tour Contracts

Press Trust of India

COLOMBO: Senior batsman Angelo Mathews on Wednesday pulled out of the upcoming limited-overs series against India citing personal reasons as Sri Lanka Cricket announced that 29 of the 30 players short-listed for the assignment have signed their contracts.

The 34-year-old Mathews was not a part of the squad that toured England recently and last played the Test series against Bangladesh in April. The India series comprising three ODIs and as many T20s begins here on July 13.

"Sri Lanka Cricket wishes to announce that 29 players, out of the 30 members nominated by the Cricket Selectors to be considered for the White-Ball Series against India, have signed the Tour Contract," said the SLC in a statement.

Angelo Mathews, who was included in the respective 30-member squad, requested Sri Lanka Cricket to relieve him from National Duties, owing to personal reasons, until further notice."

Sources, however, told PTI that Mathews, the seniormost among the current crop of players, and Test captain Dimuth Karunaratne were excluded from the contracts that were offered on Wednesday morning.

An unhappy Mathews has reportedly written to the SLC administration stating that he is considering retirement. He is expected to make a formal announcement of his intentions in a few days.

What the SLC did on Wednesday was to offer contracts on the basis of each tour, a source said.

"There will be no annual contracts as the immediate need was to sign players for the series against India," he said.

The source said that all players who had previously refused to sign contracts did sign them on Wednesday after they were given a July 8 deadline.

Under the SLC's performance based pay plan, 24 of the leading players had been offered contracts under four categories.

In the categories released, only six players were in category A and their annual pay ranged between USD 70,000 to 100,000.

Reports said all-rounder Dhananjaya de Silva and wicket-keeper Niroshan Dickwella were offered the highest pay grade of USD 100,000 each.

Players felt the plan lacked transparency and the proposed pay would be much lower than the approved scales of the Federation of International Cricket Association (FICA).

The players had flown to England for the limited overs tour without signing national contracts. Sri Lanka lost all their matches in England barring a rained out game.

Football Fan Dilip Kumar Had A 'Run-In' With Spectators During Rovers Cup Final

Press Trust of India

KOLKATA: Legendary actor Dilip Kumar was an avid football lover, shared a deep connection with one of Kolkata's big three legacy clubs, Mohammedan Sporting, and was a huge fan of the great Chuni Goswami.

From a treasure trove of anecdotes, two incidents stand out. Legend has it that when Goswami announced his international retirement in 1964 in Mumbai, two "special fans" requested him to change his decision.

The gentlemen in question were Kumar and Pran -- two Bollywood icons who would not miss a match at the Cooperage if Goswami was playing.

Another story involved Kumar having a "run-in" with rival supporters during the final of an erstwhile premier tournament.

One of India's enduring film legends, Kumar died at a Mumbai hospital on Wednesday after prolonged illness. He was 98.

Circa 1980, A familiar face during the Rovers Cup whenever Mohammedan Sporting played in the premier tournament, Kumar was invited as a chief guest for the 1980 final between his favourite club and East Bengal.

The Mohammedan Sporting captain of the match, Victor Amalraj, recalled how the Bollywood icon "got annoyed and was about to leave the stage before things were brought under control".

"Back then, the Raaj Kumar-Rajesh Kumar film Maryada was a big hit. Some rival supporters started chanting Raaj Kumar's name at the half-time that made Dilip Saab very annoyed," recollected the former India skipper Amalraj while talking to PTI from Hyderabad.

"He stood up from the stage and told their supporters, 'you should have called Raaj Kumar then, why did you invite me'. He became so annoyed but the situation was soo brought under control," Amalraj said about the final in which they were declared joint-winners following a 1-1 stalemate.

The Indian football community remembers him as someone who took an active interest in the game, often watching the matches from the stands.

Amalraj continued, "I cannot forget that day. He was a very simple human being and we were so lucky to have seen him, photographed with him in person."

"He was a big sports lover and followed all the Mumbai nd oan lubs and would be present whenever Mohammedan Sporting played in Kolkata or in Mumbai," Amalraj, who was accorded the 2019 Shant-e-Mohammedan, the club's Lifetime Achievement Award, said.

Former India Defender Subrata Bhattacharya, who was also a part of the Indian side that played in the 1984 AFC Asian Cup, was "fortunate" to have a few meetings with the legend of hindi cinema.

"Dilip Kumar was extremely passionate about football. On the field, when he'd come to a game as a chief guest, you don't get to talk much. But I had met him a few times off the field as well, and he used to love to discuss the game with us," informed Bhattacharya.

"I remember he used to be a frequent visitor in the Rovers Cup games. He had also come to the Santosh Trophy Final in Kashmir (1978-79),"

LONDON: Jorginho converted the decisive penalty kick on Wednesday to give Italy a 4-2 shootout win over Spain and a spot in the European Championship final.

The midfielder took a trademark hop at the end of his run-up before rolling the ball into the bottom corner.

The match had finished 1-1 through extra time. Federico Chiesa scored for Italy with a curling shot in the 60th minute but Alvaro Morata equalized for Spain in the 80th.

Morata missed the next-to-last kick in the shootout, giving Jorginho the chance to win it.

Italy will be back at Wembley Stadium for the final on Sunday against either England or Denmark.

Argentina Advances On Penalties To Copa Final Against Brazil

Agencies

BRASILIA: It will be Lionel Messi's Argentina against Neymar's Brazil in the Copa America final on Saturday at the historic Maracana Stadium in Rio de Janeiro.

Argentina won its semifinal against Colombia 3-2 on penalties after three saves by goalkeeper Emiliano Martinez. Regular time ended 1-1 at the Man Garrincha Stadium in Brasilia on Wednesday.

"Dibu is a phenomenon. We trusted him," Messi said after the match, in a reference to Martinez' nickname.

"It was an objective to play all the matches and now we will try to win this final."

Argentina hasn't captured a major title since 1993 when it won Copa America. On that occasion, the team eliminated Colombia on penalties 6-5 in the semifinal after a goalless draw.

Brazil beat Peru 1-0 on Monday to advance to the final. The Selecao has never lost a Copa America final at home and has won five out of six matches so far. Neymar said after the semifinal he wanted to meet his Barcelona mentor Messi at the decider.

"Both of us are in the final, I know Neymar said it because we are friends and he wanted me to be there too," Messi said.

"It will surely be very close and difficult. We are aiming high, we managed to get the first objective of playing the final, playing all matches. Now we are aiming higher than ever, we are going to seek that Copa."

It took Argentina only seven minutes to open the scoring. Rodrigo de Paul found Messi in the penalty box with a through pass.

The star earned his fifth assist in the tournament with a pass to Lautaro Martinez, who put the ball in the right corner past Colombia goalkeeper David Ospina.

A more aggressive Colombia, led by Juan Guillermo Cuadrado, hit the bar and the post in the first half before it leveled in the 61st minute with Luis Diaz, who received the ball on the left of Argentina's box shot almost with no angle to beat Martinez.

Argentina reacted after 67 minutes when ngel di Mar a came into the match, replacing Nico Gonzalez. The winger created several opportunities including one in the 80th minute that ended with Davinson Sanchez saving a finish by Lautaro Martinez on the goal line.

The last big opportunity in regular time came with Messi hitting Ospina's right post in 81st minute from short range.

Martinez saved the shots taken by Sanchez, Yerry Mina and Edwin Cardona in the shootout. Messi converted his opportunity from the spot and was one of the most joyous players in the celebrations.

He seeks his first major title with Argentina against favorites Brazil.

Rodrigo de Paul missed his shot, but Leandro Paredes and Lautaro Martinez netted their chances for Argentina in the shootout. Cuadrado and Miguel Borja scored from the spot for Colombia.

In tears, Martinez said after the match he wanted to face the Brazilians in the final in the Maracana Stadium.

"This is a matter of luck, today it was mine. Brazil is a great team, the favorite," Martinez said.

"But we have a great coach, we have the best player in the world and we will try to win it, he said.

"We have nothing to regret," Colombia coach Reinaldo Rueda said. He had also reached the semifinal with Chile in 2019 and lost.

"Now we have to wait for football to give our effort back so we can give some joy to the Colombian people some other time."

Argentina and Colombia were the original hosts of Copa America, which was shifted to Brazil two weeks before kick off.

ANGELO MATHEWS, WHO WAS INCLUDED in the respective 30-member squad, requested Sri Lanka Cricket to relieve him from National Duties, owing to personal reasons, until further notice."

Big Cabinet

reshuffle of the council of ministers, Kiren Rijju, Raj Kumar Singh, Hardeep Puri, Mansukh Mandaviya, G Kishan Reddy, Parshottam Rupala and Anurag Singh Thakur were elevated as cabinet ministers.

Rijju, a prominent face from the northeast in the government headed by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, was the minister of state (independent charge) in the Ministry of Youth and Sports before the rejig. He was also an MoS in the minority affairs ministry.

A former Union home secretary, Singh was the MoS with independent charge in the power and new and renewable energy ministries. He was also an MoS in the Ministry of Skill Development.

A surprise pick during a cabinet expansion in 2017, Puri, a former diplomat, was given two important portfolios -- housing and urban affairs and aviation -- in the BJP-led government's second term.

As the housing and urban affairs minister, he has been piloting the Central Vista project, the pet project of the Modi government which is slated to revamp a considerable portion of the Lutyen's Zone in Delhi.

When the government was facing an intense attack over the Central Vista project, Puri took on the Opposition strongly while defending the initiative.

Son of BJP veteran from Himachal Pradesh Prem Kumar Dhumal, Thakur was the minister of state in the ministries of finance and corporate affairs.

He has often hit out at the critics of the government inside and outside Parliament.

Wednesday also saw a big surgery in the government leading to the axing of several heavyweight ministers holding key portfolios.

Health Minister Harsh Vardhan was in the firing line because of perceived mismanagement of the Covid second wave which took a toll of millions of lives.

Harsh Vardhan had been widely criticised for the ensuing situation as the Health Ministry is seen as the nodal ministry for management of the Covid situation and vaccine administration.

Among the senior ministers, Education Minister Ramesh Pokhriyal 'Nishank', Chemicals and Fertiliser Minister D.V. Sadananda Gowda, and Labour and Employment Minister Santosh Gangwar have also resigned.

Law and IT Minister Ravi Shankar Prasad and I&B and Environment Minister Prakash Javadekar have also put in their papers, while Social Justice and Empowerment Minister Thawar Chand Gehlot has been appointed as Governor of Karnataka.

PAGD Flays

humiliating and there are not enough words to condemn such coercive acts," PAGD spokesperson, Mohammad Yousef Tarigami said in a statement issued Wednesday.

"She is an old and frail lady and summoning her is nothing but pressure tactics of the government. Irony is that the summon was issued just hours after the PDP declined to meet the visiting Delimitation Commission," he added.

He further said that PAGD strongly condemns the issuance of summon to former Union Minister Mufti Mohammad Sayeed's widow and demanded that such "vindictive measures" must be put to an end immediately.

On Tuesday, hours after the PDP announced its decision to stay away from the proceedings of the Delimitation Commission, the ED served a notice on the mother of its president Mehbooba Mufti asking her appear at the agency's office here on July 14 in connection with a money laundering case.

Tarigami, who is also a senior CPI (M) leader, said that the muzzling the voices of dissent by using probe agencies against political opponents was unacceptable.

"This is nothing but part of vindictive policies to suppress dissent and disagreement and to silence the genuine demand for the reversal of unilateral and unconstitutional decisions of August 5, 2019," he said.

Delimitation Talks

on a four-day visit to Jammu and Kashmir to interact with leaders of political parties and officials to gather "first hand" inputs on the conduct of the mega exercise to redraw constituencies and carve out new ones in the UT.

All major political parties have met the commission and submitted memoranda of suggestions and demands at to how to carry out the delimitation exercise in Jammu and Kashmir.

However, PDP and ANC decided not to be part of the exercise with Mehbooba's Mufti's party saying that there was a perception that the outcome of the process was preplanned.

The parties which met the Delimitation Commission included the National Conference, Congress, CPI (M), Apni Party and the People's Conference.

They urged the delegation to carry out the exercise in a free, fair and transparent manner so that the unity and integrity of Jammu and Kashmir is safeguarded.

While the majority of the parties suggested that population should be the main criteria for reorganisation of constituencies, the People's Conference and the CPI (M) demanded that the census figures of 2011 should be the benchmark for the exercise.

When Dilip Kumar

everywhere," Ahad says while remembering the noble soul. "But somehow locals would get to know and barge his temporary shelter."

The retreat was equally boosting the hotel industry as many locals who wished for Dilip Kumar's single glimpse would book hotels for days, sometimes returning back with a Rs 10 note with the superstar's signature and selling them in Srinagar for more than Rs 150.

Sitting inside the Plymouth car, Abdul Ahad, Dilip Kumar and Saira Bano journeyed towards Baba Reshi. "I could see something on the face of the celebrated, childless couple," Ahad recalls the wistful memories. "It was hope."

On reaching Baba Reshi, Saira Bano stepped out in absolute reverence and haste. She was wearing a pure silk Saree worth Rs 20,000, Abdul Ahad recalls, and yet she walked like a mystic in search of something her fate had long deprived her of.

"Dilip Kumar was informed by someone that any couple that was longing for a child should pay visit to Baba Reshi in Kashmir," he recalls. "It wasn't a misplaced notion. Hundreds of couple after years of longing for a child had enjoyed the essence of parenthood, soon after paying a visit to Baba Reshi."

Following the same steps, the couple had drifted towards Baba Reshi to end their wait.

"I could see their longing for a child," says the octogenarian Ahad. "The lawn of Baba Reshi was full of dirt as it had rained for a few hours before our arrival. Saira Ji passed directly through that pile of dirt, soiling her expensive Saree and crying her heart out over her denied motherhood."

She went on towards the 'Dab'—a mini balcony, more like a window opened up with a ledge to the outside—of the shrine.

The legend has it, the woman who paints that 'Dab' with mud would soon be blessed with a child. "Saira Banu did the same," the chaperone of the celebrated couple recounts. "It was as if her sense of learned helplessness was fully developed. She was ready to go to any length to break the jinx of her motherhood."

Almost immediately, on the other side of the lawn, Dilip Kumar was standing near the donation box of the shrine. "He was stuffing around ten to fifteen thousand rupees, all in cash, from the small gap of the donation box, trying to turn the screw of his destiny," Abdul Ahad recounts.

"But alas, being parents was never in their fate," Ahad rues.

However, years before his demise, Dilip Kumar said that he and his wife—now his widow—Saira Banu had no regrets about being the childless couple.

"It would have been great if we had our own kids," Dilip Kumar had said. "But we have no regrets. We are both submissive to the will of God. As for incompleteness, I must tell you that neither Saira nor I can complain of a lack of contentment. It is enough for us that we have our families to share our happiness and our small dismays with.

Mine is a large family, with so many nieces and nephews and their families of growing kids speaking the language of today, which is as bewildering as it is befitting the times they are living in. Saira's is a small family comprising her brother Sultan and his kids and grandchildren. We feel we are lucky to be there for them when they need us."

However, Abdul Ahad is privy to the couple's secret shrine visit to end the curse of childlessness. "They were the king and queen of the Indian cinema then," Ahad says. "But then, as they say, Kabhi kisi ko mukammal jahan nahi milta."

"Time-bound procedure has also been established wherein approval/denial shall be conveyed to the applicant through the website within 12 days," he said.

He further added that the initiative also aims at rectifying the shortcomings pointed out by the Electrical Inspection Agency within specified period in respect of a consumer after which the e-fitness certificate shall be issued by merely going through the rectified photographs uploaded by the applicant, without the need for re-inspection, thereby saving time.

Dilip Kumar

catch a glimpse of the legendary star before his final journey.

Among those who visited and consoled with his wife Saira Banu were ministers and film stars.

Later, his body was ceremonially draped in the national Tricolour by a Mumbai Police contingent, and taken in procession to the Juhu Muslim Cemetery with scores of people lined up on both sides of the roads to bid a tearful adieu.

At the cemetery, many other top Bollywood personalities had gathered for his final 'deedar', awaiting the funeral cortege brought by the police and his family members.

After the traditional rituals and prayers and the state protocols, the thespian was laid to rest as many of the mourners cried and others fought back their tears.

A stunned nation woke up to learn of the demise of Dilip Saab - as he was popularly known in the film industry where he strode like a colossus for over 6 decades.

Making the shocking announcement, Dilip Kumar's close aide Faisal Farooqui, said that he breathed his last around 7.30 am at the Hinduja Hospital following bouts of old-age related illnesses.

Top people from all walks of life including President R.N. Kovind, Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Chief Minister Uddhav Thackeray, Congress President Sonia Gandhi, party leader Rahul Gandhi, mourned his passing, even as social media was flooded with grief and admiration for the legend.

Besides, two Bharat Ratnas Lata Mangeshkar and Sachin Tendulkar, Amitabh Bachchan, Shahid Rafi - son of legendary singer Mohammed Rafi who crooned many songs for the late actor - and other prominent Bollywood personalities mourned his demise and recalled his contributions to the film industry.

RBI Imposes Penalties On 14 Banks For Various Rule Violations

Agencies

The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) on July 7 imposed monetary penalties on 14 banks including Bandhan Bank, Bank of Baroda and State Bank of India (SBI) for various rule violations, the central bank said in a press release. These 14 banks include public sector banks, private banks, foreign bank, Co-operative banks and one small finance bank.

The violations include non-compliance with certain provisions of directions issued by RBI on 'Lending to Non-Banking Financial Companies (NBFCs)' 'Bank Finance to Non-Banking Financial Companies (NBFCs)' and 'Loans and Advances – Statutory and Other Restrictions', the RBI said.

This is probably the highest number of banks receiving RBI monetary penalties on a single day for various rule violations. According to an industry source, the RBI penalties on these banks are mainly linked to banks' dealings with crisis-ridden Dewan Housing Finance Corporation (DHFL) and its group companies. "These violations are mainly related to DHFL," said the source.

The RBI release said a scrutiny in the accounts of the companies of a group was carried out by the RBI and it was subsequently observed that the banks had failed to comply with provisions of one or more of the aforesaid directions issued by RBI and/or contravened provisions of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949, the RBI said. The group mentioned here is mainly DHFL.

Further, notices were issued to the banks advising them to show cause as to why penalty should not be imposed for non-compliance with the directions/contraventions of provisions of Banking Regulation Act, 1949, the RBI said. Following its examination, the RBI concluded that violations warrant imposition of monetary penalty on fourteen banks, the RBI said.

Violations also pertain to rules on 'Creation of a Central Repository of Large Common Exposures – Across Banks', 'Reporting to Central Repository of Information on Large Credits (CRILC)', 'Operating Guidelines for Small Finance Banks' and for contraventions of provisions of Section 19(2) and Section 20 (1) of Banking Regulation Act, 1949, the RBI said.

Other banks upon which the monetary penalties have been imposed include Bank of Maharashtra, Central Bank of India, Credit Suisse, Indian Bank, IndusInd Bank, Karnataka Bank, Karur Vysya Bank, Punjab and Sind Bank, South Indian Bank, The Jammu and Kashmir Bank and Utkarsh Small Finance Bank.

The quantum of penalties ranges from Rs 50 lakh to Rs 2 crore each. The penalties have been imposed in exercise of powers vested in RBI under the provisions of section 47 A (1) (c) read with sections 46 (4) (i) and 51 (1), of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949, as applicable, the RBI said.

Further, this action is based on the deficiencies in regulatory compliance and is not intended to pronounce upon the validity of any transaction or agreement entered into by the banks with their customers, the RBI said.

72% Indians Frightened About Shopping In-Store Amid Covid: Report

NEW DELHI: Despite the unabated rise of e-commerce and the fear to physically shop, 72 per cent of Indians are most frightened about shopping in-store as compared with their global counterparts in the wake of Covid-19, a new report showed on Wednesday.

Consumers on the whole are demanding integrated omnichannel offerings from retailers and brands.

While 86 per cent of Indian shoppers think that retailers need to get better at giving them products, services and experience that they want from online shopping, 67 per cent of Indian consumers refuse to shop with anyone who does not meet their demands, according to 'Future Shopper Report 2021' by global communications firm Wunderman Thompson Commerce.

"eCommerce can no longer be treated as the supplementary sales channel. Global shoppers have clearly stated that, in the future, it will be their primary channel for retail purchasing," said Hugh Fletcher, Global Head of Consultancy and Innovation at Wunderman Thompson Commerce.

For some organisations, and particularly marketplaces, they are reaping the rewards of investing in a strong online presence, "while the news has been littered with stories of businesses who have not identified these changing demands going bust," Fletcher said in a statement.

Two-thirds (64 per cent) of global shoppers say that they prefer to shop with brands that have both an online and offline presence, while 59 per cent of consumers said they wished brands would communicate seamlessly with them across all channels, digital and physical.

The report revealed that in a post-pandemic world, online shopping will account for over half (51 per cent) of retail sales globally with 72 per cent of global shoppers saying that on-line shopping came to their rescue in 2020 and nearly three-quarters (73 per cent) saying e-commerce would be more important to them in 2021.

Across Asia, consumers reported that digital commerce has been more important to them during the pandemic than anywhere else and it is shoppers in this region who are also now demanding the most from digital retailers, said the report.

The report said that 86 per cent of Indian shoppers are less prepared to put up with mediocre or even 'satisfactory' shopping experiences and demand excellence from brands and retailers.

"2021 and beyond will usher in an era of more diverse online offerings, with marketplaces, direct-to-consumer brand sites and social commerce all having a key role to play," said Fletcher.--IANS

Twitter India Interim Grievance Officer Quits

Agencies

NEW DELHI: Twitter's interim resident grievance officer for India has stepped down, leaving the micro-blogging site without a grievance official as mandated by the new IT rules to address complaints from Indian subscribers, according to a source.

The source said that Dharmendra Chatur, who was recently appointed as interim resident grievance officer for India by Twitter, has quit from the post.

The social media company's website no longer displays his name, as required under Information Technology (Intermediary Guidelines and Digital Media Ethics Code) Rules 2021.

Twitter declined to comment on the development.

The development comes at a time when the micro-blogging platform has been engaged in a tussle with the Indian government over the new social media rules.

The government has slammed Twitter for deliberate defiance and failure to comply with the country's new IT rules.

The new rules which came into effect from May 25 mandate social media companies to establish a grievance redressal mechanism for resolving complaints from the users or victims.

All significant social media companies, with over 50 lakh user base shall appoint a grievance officer to deal with such complaints and share the name and contact details of such officers.

The big social media companies are mandated to appoint a chief compliance officer, a Nodal Contact Person and a resident grievance officer.

All of them should be resident in India.

Twitter in response to the final notice issued by the government on June 5 had said that it intends to comply with the new IT rules and will share details of the chief compliance officer.

In the meantime, the micro-blogging platform had appointed Chatur as interim resident grievance officer for India.

Twitter now displays the company's name in the place of grievance officer for India with a US address and an email ID.

According to a government official, the company has lost legal protection as an intermediary and will be legally held responsible for all content posted by its users on the platform.

Fitch Cuts India Growth Forecast To 10%, Says Rapid Vaccination To Support Revival

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

Fitch Ratings on Wednesday cut India's growth forecast to 10 per cent for the current fiscal, from 12.8 per cent estimated earlier, due to slowing recovery post second wave of COVID-19, and said rapid vaccination could support a sustainable revival in business and consumer confidence.

In a report, the global rating agency said the challenges for banking sector posed by the coronavirus pandemic have increased due to a virulent second wave in the first quarter of the financial year ending March 2022 (FY22).

"Fitch Ratings revised down India's real GDP for FY22 by 280bp to 10 per cent, underlining our belief that renewed restrictions have slowed recovery efforts and left banks with a moderately worse outlook for business and revenue generation in FY22," it said.

Fitch believes that rapid vaccination could support a sustainable revival in business and consumer confidence; however, without it, economic recovery would remain vulnerable to further waves and lockdowns.

It said localised lockdowns during the second wave kept economic activity from stalling to levels similar to those during 2020, but disruption in several key business centres has slowed the recovery and dented from the COVID-19 pandemic.

The agency estimates India's medium term growth potential at about 6.5 per cent.

Stating that vaccination is key for business revival and relief measures would only provide interim support, Fitch said the low vaccination rate makes India vulnerable to further waves of the pandemic.

"Only 4.7 per cent of its 1.37 billion population was fully vaccinated as of July 5, 2021. This poses risks to the prospects of a meaningful and sustainable economic recovery," it added.

Indian economy contracted by 7.3 per cent in fiscal 2020-21 as the country battled the first wave of COVID, as against a 4 per cent growth in 2019-20.

GDP growth in current fiscal was estimated to be in double digits initially, but a severe second wave of pandemic has led to various agencies cut growth projections.

Farmers Gear Up For Protest Against Fuel Price Hike

Agenceis

NEW DELHI: Large contingents of farmers have started arriving at protest sites in preparation for their agitation Thursday against fuel price hike, the Samyukt Kisan Morcha (SKM) said on Wednesday. "At the call of Samyukt Kisan Morcha, protests will be organised across India tomorrow (July 8) from 10 am to 12 noon for two hours against the hike in diesel, petrol and cooking gas prices," the umbrella body of over 40 farm unions said.

The protestors will reach designated public locations with any means of transport including scooters, motorcycles, tractors, cars, buses, trucks and also with empty gas cylinders, it said.

On Wednesday, the petrol prices in Delhi as well as Kolkata crossed the Rs 100 a litre mark.

The SKM has demanded that the fuel prices be halved with immediate effect.

It has also appealed to the protestors to keep the demonstration peaceful and on the roadside, without blocking any pathways.

"This is an issue that affects every section of the society, and SKM appeals that farmers, labourers, youth, students, women, employees, shopkeepers, transporters, traders and others be part of these protests everywhere," the body said.

The SKM has also planned fresh rounds of protests during the monsoon session of the parliament scheduled later this month, when 200 protestors will agitate everyday outside the Parliament building reiterating their demands of repealing the three farm laws and a legal guarantee for Minimum Support price (MSP).

Over the last seven months, thousands of farmers from different parts of the country have been protesting at Delhi borders against the new farm laws which, they claim, will do away with the MSP system and leave them at the mercy of big corporations.

The government, however, has been protecting the laws as major agricultural reforms.

Elgar Case Accused On Hunger Strike In Jail Over Stan Swamy's Death

Agenceis

MUMBAI: Ten accused in the Elgar Parishad-Maoist links case went on a one-day hunger strike in the Talaja jail in neighbouring Navi Mumbai on Wednesday to protest against what they termed as an "institutional murder" of co-accused Jesuit priest Stan Swamy.

They also demanded action against officials of the National Investigation Agency (NIA), which is conducting a probe into the Elgar Parishad case, and former superintendent of the Talaja jail.

Stan Swamy, 84, was arrested by the NIA from Ranchi in October 2020 under the stringent Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act (UAPA) and lodged at the Talaja Central Jail in Navi Mumbai.

He suffered a cardiac arrest and died at a Mumbai hospital on Monday in the middle of his fight for bail on health grounds.

The Elgar Parishad case is related to inflammatory speeches made at a conclave held in Pune on December 31, 2017, which, the police claimed, triggered violence the next day near the Koregaon-Bhima war memorial located on the outskirts of the western Maharashtra city.

The police had claimed the conclave was organised by people with alleged Maoist links.

The other accused in the case termed Stan Swamy's death an "institutional murder" and held the "negligent jails, indifferent courts and malicious investigating agencies" responsible for it.

As a mark of protest, 10 of the co-accused in the case - Rona Wilson, Surendra Gadling, Sudhir Dhawale, Mahesh Raut, Arun Ferreira, Vernon Gonsalves, Gautam Navlakha, Anand Teltumbde, Ramesh Gaichor and Sagar Gorkhe - went on a one-day fast in the Talaja jail on Wednesday.

They informed about the protest to their family members, who released a statement saying all Elgar case prisoners have blamed the NIA and the Talaja jail's former superintendent Kaustubh Kurlekar for the death of Father Stan Swamy.

They believe that "the separation of Stan Swamy from them is a deliberate institutional murder," the release said.

The statement alleged that the NIA and Kurlekar never missed a single opportunity to "harass" Stan Swamy, whether it was the "ghastly treatment" inside the jail, the haste to transfer him back from hospital to jail or even protesting against trivial things like a sipper (which Stan Swamy required due to his medical conditions).

"It is these that have caused the death of Stan Swamy and therefore, for this institutional murder, NIA officials and Kurlekar should be tried under Section 302 (murder) of the Indian Penal Code," the statement said, while demanding a judicial inquiry into his death.

The statement said the family members of the accused will submit these demands to Maharashtra Chief Minister Uddhav Thackeray through the Talaja jail administration.

It also said that though these accused were lodged in different barracks, they met on Tuesday and shared their memories of Father Stan Swamy, and also observed a two-minute silence as a mark of tribute to him.

Three women accused in the case- Sudha Bharadwaj, Shoma Sen and Jyoti Jagtap - are currently lodged at the Byculla prison in Mumbai.

One of Bollywood's most iconic and revered actors, Dilip Kumar passed away at the age of 98, from prolonged illness.

His death sparked a wave of tributes rushing in from the film industry, political fraternity, sportspersons and fans.

Kumar, who was born Mohammed Yusuf Khan on December 11, 1922, changed his name soon after venturing into the industry to spare himself his stern father's criticism.

With Dev Anand and Raj Kapoor, Dilip Kumar was one of the three most legendary and marketable actors, who defined the golden age of Indian cinema from the 1940s to the 1960s.

Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina expressed deep shock and sorrow at the death of the actor. She prayed for the eternal salvation of the departed soul and expressed sympathy to the bereaved family members.

Prime Minister Of India Narendra Modi and Prime Minister of Pakistan Imran Khan both paid tribute to the late actor on twitter.

The widespread pouring of condolences on social media platforms is essentially a testament to Dilip Kumar's charm which transcended all boundaries. He was beloved across the subcontinent till his death.

Over the span of his five-decade career, he was given the nickname of 'The Tragedy King' owing to a sense of melancholy and gloom that pervaded most of his roles.

He is often hailed as the 'First Khan' of Bollywood, paving way for a long list of future Khans to dominate the industry.

Kumar ventured into Bollywood with his debut 1944 film Jwar Bhata, which was produced by Bombay Talkies

His other notable films are

Andaz (1949), Aan (1952), Daag (1952), Devdas (1955), Azaad (1955), Mughal-e-Azam (1960), Gunga Jamuna (1961), and Ram Aur Shyam (1967).

Dilip Kumar was in a long relationship with Bollywood diva Madhubala but the duo never married.

In 1966 actress Saira Bano and Dilip Kumar tied the knot. They had been living ever since in Bandra, Mumbai till his death.

The actor held the Guinness World Record for bagging the most film awards by an Indian actor. He had received eight Filmfare Awards for Best Actor, a Filmfare Lifetime Achievement Award, a Special Recognition Filmfare Award among others.

If adjusted to inflation, Kumar starrer historic drama Mughal-E-Azam remains the highest-grossing film in India.

Dilip Kumar's extraordinary contribution to the film industry will be remembered for ages to come.

Imran Khan Recalls Dilip Kumar's Generosity

Agenceis

Pakistan Prime Minister Imran Khan on Wednesday condoled the death of Indian cinema icon Dilip Kumar, saying he can never forget his generosity in helping to raise funds for a trust to set up cancer hospitals in his mother's memory.

Kumar, India's enduring film legend through the decades, died at a Mumbai hospital in the morning after a prolonged illness. He was 98.

"Saddened to learn of Dilip Kumar's passing, I can never forget his generosity in giving his time to help raise funds for SKMTH when (the) project launched. This is the most difficult time - to raise (the) first 10% of the funds & his appearance in Pak & London helped raise huge amounts," Khan tweeted.

"Apart from this, for my generation Dilip Kumar was the greatest and most versatile actor," he said.

Shaukat Khanum Memorial Cancer Hospital and Research Centres are state-of-the-art cancer centres located in Lahore and Peshawar.

SKMCH&RC, Lahore was the first project of the Shaukat Khanum Memorial Trust, which was the brainchild of the cricketer-turned-politician Khan. The inspiration to build the hospital came after his mother, Shaukat Khanum, succumbed to cancer in 1985. Kumar was born on December 11, 1922 at his family home in the Qissa Khawani Bazaar area of Peshawar.

The Pakistan government has already declared his native house as a national heritage and completed all formalities to convert it into a museum in his name.

Kumar, known to generations of film-goers as "tragedy king" for his portrayal of the brooding, intense romantic in classics such as "Mughal-e-Azam" and "Devdas", had been admitted to the Hinduja Hospital, a non-COVID-19 facility in Khar, since last Tuesday.

Kumar, born Yousuf Khan and often known as the Nehruvian hero, did his first film "Jwar Bhata" in 1944 and his last "Qila" in 1998, 54 years later. The five-decade career included "Mughal-e-Azam", "Devdas", "Naya Daur", and "Ram Aur Shyam", and later, as he graduated to character roles, "Shakti" and "Karma".—(PTI)

Akali Dal Wants 5 Seats Reserved For Sikhs In Jammu and Kashmir Assembly

Agenceis

Chandigarh: The Shiromani Akali Dal (SAD) has urged the Jammu and Kashmir Delimitation Commission to reserve five seats for members of the Sikh community in the Legislative Assembly.

Senior party leader and former MP Prof Prem Singh Chandumajra handed over a letter written by SAD President Sukhbir Singh Badal in this regard to Delimitation Commission Chairman Justice (retd) Ranjana Prakash Desai in Srinagar on Tuesday.

The SAD has urged the Commission to "favourably" consider reserving three seats for the Sikh community in Jammu and two seats in Srinagar.

"The Commission assured to consider the demand sympathetically," SAD said in an official release.

"Several times, including at the time of partition of the country, promises were made to the Sikh population of Jammu and Kashmir that counter checks would be created in the democratic process to ensure their social and economic well being. It was even proposed that a definite number of seats would be reserved for members of the Sikh community in the Jammu and Kashmir legislature on the pattern of that done for the Anglo Indian community in parliament and state assemblies. Sadly, the then Congress government did not honour any of the promises made to the Sikh community post-partition," said Sukhbir Badal in his communique to the Delimitation Commission.

Asking the Commission to right this "historical wrong", Mr Badal said reservation of seats for Sikhs in the Jammu and Kashmir would ensure the "voice of the community was taken into consideration while making executive decisions."

He said Sikhs in Jammu and Kashmir had been complaining for a long time that they were being left behind in the development process because there was no reservation for Sikhs in jobs in Jammu and Kashmir "despite their minority status".

"All these issues, including reservations in educational institutions, can be taken up once the Sikhs have a say in governance," the SAD President added.

Meanwhile, Mr Chandumajra while apprising the Commission members about issues, said the Sikh community had a rich historical and cultural association with Jammu and Kashmir.

"Despite many upheavals, including the partition of the country and horrendous events like the mass killing of members of the Sikh community in Singhpora, the community continues to remain an inseparable part of Jammu and Kashmir," Mr Chandumajra briefed the Commission.

As per the release, the SAD delegation informed the Commission that it had held discussions with the Sikh community of Jammu and Kashmir and that the community also wanted a say in governance.

Year Post 'Ghar Wapsi', Jyotiraditya Scindia Rewarded For Giving MP to BJP

Agenceis

BHOPAL: More than a year after playing a key role in installation of a BJP government in Madhya Pradesh, Jyotiraditya Scindia was rewarded with a berth in the Union Cabinet, a familiar terrain for the Rajya Sabha member who had served as a junior minister in the Congress-led UPA government.

Scindia (50) resigned from the Congress and joined the BJP in March 2020 and his move triggered a chain of events which finally culminated in the collapse of the Kamal Nath government just 15 months after its formation, paving the way for the saffron party to assume power which it lost towards the end of 2018.

On joining the BJP, he was made a Rajya Sabha member, while Shivraj Singh Chouhan came back as the chief minister. The scion of the former royal family of Gwalior had started showing signs of restlessness after the Congress high command chose veteran Kamal Nath over him to take over as the chief minister in December 2018.

Things came to a head when Scindia warned of "hitting the streets" against his own party-led government if promises made to people in the manifesto were not fulfilled. The then chief minister Kamal Nath's retort that Scindia was free to carry out his threat to launch an agitation, finally proved his undoing.

Born on January 1, 1971, and educated in Harvard and Stanford institutions, Scindia has traversed a long way after contesting his maiden election as a Congress candidate in 2002, a bypoll in the Guna Lok Sabha constituency, which was held because of the sudden death of his father, Madhavrao Scindia, in a plane crash.

In 2007, he was inducted into the UPA government and remained a part of the Union Cabinet till 2014 by serving as a minister of state for communications, commerce and industry and power. In 2014, he was again elected from Guna, his traditional seat for a fourth time but lost from the constituency in the 2019 Lok Sabha polls to BJP candidate KP Yadav, who was once close to him.

Scindia was the face of the Congress campaign in his capacity as the chairman of the poll campaign committee during the 2018 assembly polls in Madhya Pradesh. However, when the party came to power in the state after a drought of 15 years, the coveted post of chief minister went to Nath.

After that he also lost the Lok Sabha polls from Guna and since then, he was not feeling comfortable with the Congress leadership in the state, sources close to him said.

"While in the Congress, Scindia once paid a courtesy visit to Shivraj Singh Chouhan (then he was not CM) and that was the first indication of Scindia hobnobbing with the BJP," his close aide Pankaj Chaturvedi said.

Then came the big act - 22 Congress MLAs loyal to Scindia, including six ministers, resigned from their assembly's membership and toppled the Congress government. The BJP rewarded his loyalists by inducting most of them into the cabinet of Chouhan.

A majority of them later won assembly bypolls necessitated by the mass resignations of Congress MLAs.

In the run-up to the bypolls in Madhya Pradesh, when Scindia was asked about the 'political coup' and when he had taken the final call to topple the Congress government, he told PTI, "When Nath asked me to hit the road and that was the final call."

Scindia was the second member from his clan to pull down a Congress government in Madhya Pradesh, decades after 'Rajmata' Vijaya Raje Scindia toppled the "anti-people" Congress government in the state, Chouhan earlier said.

The entire Scindia family is now part of one party (BJP), Chouhan had said.

Born In Tibet, Have Been Longest Guest Of India, Feel Proud: Dalai Lama

Agenceis

Hyderabad: Tibetan spiritual leader the Dalai Lama today said he is the "longest guest" of India, who would never cause any trouble to his host.

In a virtual interactive session with GV Prasad, Co-Chairman and Managing Director of Dr Reddy's Laboratories and others, Dalai Lama said India which practices "Ahimsa and Karuna" (non violence and compassion) stands as a role model for other countries.

"As I always mentioned, India is my home. I was born in Tibet. But most of my life was spent in this country... I really feel proud that I am a guest of the Indian government. I think I am the longest guest of the Indian government. But at least that guest will not create a problem," he said.

He remarked that religious harmony in India was remarkable and there is "free media."

Describing India as a secular country, the Tibetan leader in exile said he has been promoting "Ahimsa and Compassion", which are intrinsic values of Indians that have been followed over thousands of years.

"With over a billion population, India is a perfect example of religious harmony. It is not because of any political reasons, but it is because of its people. Some of the countries need to follow India's principles of religious harmony," he said.

Dalai Lama advised the medical fraternity to be more compassionate while discharging their duties. Wishes poured in from around the globe on the occasion of his 86th birthday on Tuesday.

Thanking everyone, including Prime Minister Narendra Modi for their wishes, Dalai Lama said he was determined that he must live at least 110 years.

5G Roll Out: Court Grants Week To Juhi Chawla To Deposit ₹ 20 Lakh Fine

Agenceis

NEW DELHI: The Delhi High Court on Wednesday granted a week to Bollywood actress Juhi Chawla and two others to deposit 20 lakh in costs imposed on them for abusing the process of law by way of their lawsuit challenging 5G wireless network technology.

"The court is shocked at the conduct of the plaintiffs," Justice JR Midha said as he observed that Ms Chawla and others were "not even willing to gracefully deposit the costs".

The judge was hearing three applications moved by the actor for refund of court fees, waiver of costs and replacing the word "dismissed" in the judgement with "rejected".

The court's reaction came after Ms Chawla's counsel, Senior Advocate Meet Malhotra's, after withdrawing the application for waiver of costs, said that costs would either be deposited in a week or ten days, or legal remedies against the same would be taken.

"On one hand you move frivolous application and on the other hand, you withdraw the application and plaintiffs are not even willing to gracefully deposit the costs," the court said.

The court stated that it, in fact, took a lenient view when it imposed costs of 20 lakh on Ms Chawla and others and did not initiate contempt proceedings.

"I was shocked... This court took a lenient view and did not issue contempt when case was made out... I was totally inclined. You say court had no power to impose costs (but) court has the power to issue contempt," the court said as it took strong exception to the application.

Mr Malhotra clarified that the stand was not that the costs would not be paid, and did not even pressing the application for its waiver.

"It is unintended... Today also, this is my instruction that nobody said that they wouldn't. I saw what happened (in the judgement). I fully understand," he said.

The court recorded Mr Malhotra's statement that he sought a weeks' time to deposit costs and that recourse may be taken to avail legal remedies.

The application for refund of court fees was also withdrawn by Mr Malhotra.

Advocate Deepak Khosla, appearing for Ms Chawla and others, informed that the court fee had already been paid.

"I'm yet to see a person in my judicial career a person who is not willing to pay court fees," the judge remarked as the application was dismissed as withdrawn.

"Let bygones be bygones," Mr Malhotra urged the court.

The court ordered that the third application seeking rejection of plaint would be placed before Justice Sanjeev Narula after the deposit of court fees.

Mr Malhotra argued that plaint, which "never went up to the level of suit", could only be rejected or returned in terms of the Civil Procedure Code, and not dismissed.

Further hearing in the case will take place on July 12.

In June, the high court had dismissed the lawsuit by Ms Chawla and other others against the setting up of 5G wireless networks in the country and slapped a cost of 20 lakh.

The court had described the plea as "defective", "abuse of process of law" and filed for "gaining publicity".

Justice Midha said the plaint in which questions have been raised about health hazards due to the 5G technology was "not maintainable" and was "stuffed with unnecessary scandalous, frivolous and vexatious averments" which are liable to be struck down.

The court said the suit filed by actress-environmentalist and others was to gain publicity which was clear as Ms Chawla circulated the video conferencing link of the hearing on her social media account which resulted in the repeated disruptions thrice by unknown miscreants who continued disruptions despite repeated warnings.

The suit sought a direction to the authorities to certify to the public at large that how 5G technology is safe to humans, animals and every type of living organism, flora and fauna.

It said that if the telecom industry's plans for 5G came to fruition, no person, animal, bird, insect and plant on earth will be able to avoid exposure, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, to levels of RF radiation that are 10x to 100x times greater than what exists today.
