Nomads Fear Losses As Unseasonal Snowfall Makes Chenab Valley Cold

Press Trust Of India

Bhaderwah: Unseasonal snowfall in the higher reaches of Chenab Valley has left hundreds of nomadic families in distress as they are compelled to halt their onward journey along with their livestock.

Cold wave conditions have engulfed the upper reaches of Doda, Kishtwar and Ramban districts, triggering panic among the nomads who have started their bi-annual migration from the plains in the union territory and Punjab.

Officials said fresh snowfall was reported in Kailash Mountain Range, Kainthi, Padri Gali, Bhaal Padri, Seoj, Shankh Padar, Rishi Dal, Gau-Peeda, Gan-Thak, Khanni-top, Guldanda, Chattar Galla and Asha Pati Glacier surrounding Bhaderwah Valley since Monday night.

The unseasonal snowfall was also reported from Braid Bal, Nehyed Chilly, Sharonth Dhar, Katardhar, Kainthi, Laloo Paani, Kaljugasar, Duggan Top, Goha and Sinthan Top besides the high altitude meadows of Gandoh.

These high altitude and vast grazing meadows remain inhabited by the Gujjar and Bakarwal tribes during summers. Due to unseasonal snowfall and severe cold conditions, hundreds of tribal families have been stuck either on the road sides or on the lower reaches at different parts of Chenab Valley, an official said. More on P6

Cannes Filmmakers Urge France To Face Colonial Past In Algeria, Africa

▼ilm-makers are holding up a mirror to France over its colonial past at the Cannes festival, helped by star power and a growing French readiness to face up to injustices committed notably in Africa.

The colonization of Algeria and the horrors of the Algerian war of independence (1954-1962) deeply scarred both nations and continues to mar relations, but was hardly discussed in France in public for decades.

Although President Emmanuel Macron has acknowledged crimes committed - including a massacre by police of Algerians in Paris in 1961 which he called "inexcusable" – his government has ruled out "presenting an apology" for France's colonial past.

"I think you could say that I'm obsessed by the Algerian war," French director Philippe Faucon told AFP at the Cannes festival.

His film "Les Harkis" tells the story of Algerians who fought alongside French troops against the independence movement, only to be left behind for the most part when France pulled out of Algeria, and facing the vengeance of the victorious Algerians.

The movie places the responsibility for this "criminal betrayal" and the subsequent massacres of Harkis firmly at the doorstep of thenpresident Charles de Gaulle.

"It is necessary to recall this story and look the truth in the eyes," said Algerian-born Faucon, although historical "complexities" make easy judgments impossible. Fellow director Mathieu Vadepied also warned against facile conclusions about France's forced recruitment of Senegalese soldiers for its World War I war effort, the subject of his film "Tirailleurs" "Father and Soldier")

French superstar Omar Sy — who has won a huge international following with his roles in "Untouchable" and the Netflix smash hit "Lupin" — plays the lead in the story about a father and a son who are both forced into the trenches.

"My idea is to put things into question," Vadepied told AFP.

"Question France's historical relationship with its former colonies. what do we have to say about that today, do we even know what we

While rejecting any "frontally political" approach, he said that "if we deny the facts we can never move on, we need to tell these stories, everybody needs to know them.'

The idea was however "not to guilt-trip people, but to recognize the painful history and free our-

Sy, the France-born son of west African immigrants, told the audience at the film's opening night: "We have the same story, but we don't have the same memories." The second Cannes week will see

In his latest movie, he tells the story of Malik Oussekine, a student killed in 1986 and whose name resonates deeply among French minorities.

On the night of December 6, 1986, two police officers beat to death the 22-year-old French-Algerian on the sidelines of a student protest in Paris.

He had not been involved in the demonstration, and his killing became a turning point - triggering weeks of unrest and leading to the unprecedented conviction of the officers involved.

It took 35 years for the death of Malik Oussekine to be recounted

Centre-JK discuss truce plan

Delhi asks J&K to prepare action plan on CBM's Observer News Service

RINAGAR Centre today asked the Jammu and Kashmir Government to prepare a comprehensive time-bound action plan to implement the Confidence-Building Measures (CBM's) announced In India and Pakistan in the recent joint declaration and on the physical structures needed to implement them.

Meanwhile Centre and J&K government are actively considering a ceasefire with militants in the state. This was revealed by the union home secretary V K Duggal during a press conference here today. Asked whether there would be a ceasefire between the security forces and the militants, he said; "That is the objective, and I have spoken to the state governor and the chief minister about this but it has to be a consultative process." "The main important CBM is dialogue process. Any CBM which involves the movement of people, transport, goods and services and implementation of trade needs a dialogue process.. When can we start and how can we start." Mr Duggal said. He said the central government would provide all infrastructure support to the state administration for opening meeting points between the Kashmiris of India and Pakistan, increasing bus services across the border and facilitating trade through the new routes.

He said the other important component of the CBMs is the infrastructure needed to implement them.

"The slate government has been asked to prepare the report? What all it can handle and where it needs the support of the central government so that we can consider that." he added.

"PM Manmohan's intentions are very clear on this. We have specific instructions that these CBMs should be taken forward most-religiously and in a dedicated time-bound manner. Money and resources should not act as constraints in implementing these measures." he added.

On possible talks with separatist leaders. Duggal said Prime Minister Manmohan Singh was opposed to talks with Hurriyat Conference.

'The Prime Minister is most open to talks with anybody who has a concrete plan However, a mechanism has to be put in place for holding such talks," he told reporters. Duggal said important and positive steps were being taken in Kashmir-to restore normalcy. "The return Kashmiri Pandit migrants, and the Amarnath yatra are positive steps. I think Kashmir is on its

New Economic Bloc

ith an eye on the rising economic and military challenge from China, the United States launched Indo-Pacific Economic Framework (IPEF) in the presence of Japanese Prime Minister Fumio Kishida and the Prime Minister Narendra Modi. The IPEF has twelve initial partners with India one among them. The deal assumes profound significance in the backdrop of the ongoing war in Ukraine. At the root of it, the war is an ambitious bid by Russian president Vladimir Putin to challenge the US-dominance in the world and in this he seems to have a not-so-tacit support by his friend, the Chinese president Xi Jinping.

The conflict stems from Russia's legitimate fears of being encircled by the west and the NATO military bases reaching its doorstep. Many of the Eastern European countries which were once a part of the USSRled Warsaw Pact have become a part of NATO, heightening Russia's insecurity. The growing likelihood of Ukraine also joining NATO became the last straw for Putin. While it is nobody's case to countenance the invasion of a sovereign smaller country by its powerful neighbour, the solution to the evolving fraught situation can be resolved if the US-led West and Russia sit down and work towards addressing each other's grievances and fears.

At the larger level, the war has become a great power battle royale. America faces one of its severest tests as the world's sole superpower. Some western experts have already written the epitaph of America's unipolar moment. In that sense, it would be interesting to see who blinks first in this great power war of nerves. And that could decide the new superpower of the world. But America, despite its recent setback in Afghanistan, its failure to have its way in Syria in the teeth of the opposition from Russia and Iran, remains the world's No 1 power. Its GDP and defence expenditure remains several times higher than its nearest competitor China. But in Ukraine, we are at an interesting moment in history. The outcome of the war will determine the new global geopolitics if not the new superpower of the world.

But as the IPEF would have us believe, the US has sought to demonstrate that far from being hemmed in by the Russian invasion, would only further expand its global footprint. By launching IPEF, the US has sought to further encroach into what China considers its sphere of influence. And in response to Ukraine war, it has sought to further aggravate the situation by encouraging Finland and Sweden, Russia's neighbours to join NATO. This has created a very fraught geopolitical situation and we can only hope that its end result is not more war.

Price pinch

ural wages have been falling, unemployment is high, and inflation has been squeezing demand for non-agricultural goods emanating from the rural sector. In rural India, the food price inflation has doubled from 3.94% in March 2021 to 8.04% in March 2022. Despite signals of impending inflationary pressures building up, the Reserve Bank of India had held on to its accommodating stance for too long by keeping interest rates low. The RBI has started to increase its policy rates at long last. But this was done only after the Federal Reserve Bank of the United States of America started to raise interest rates. Now the government has stepped in by reducing duties on fuel to soften prices at the retail level.

In the months of March and April, there was a sharp rise in demand for consumer goods but the spiking price levels suddenly brought down demand in a significant way. Expectations about future demand are bleak and, according to experts, would remain soft in the coming quarters. Producers are facing high input costs and are feeling compelled to pass them on to consumers. With squeezed margins and falling demand, they are unlikely to expand going forward. High inflation and falling demand are likely to create a situation of stagflation. International conditions are unlikely to improve, with major supply chain disruptions and contraction in international trade. With a depreciating rupee, import costs are going to go up, fuelling further inflation. In the domestic economy, prices and interest rates will climb in the coming months. Unemployment would rise and growth rates take a dive. The rural sector would suffer the most. Usually, when there is a rural economic crisis, the way out is the creation of jobs and incomes in the urban sector. This time, the urban sector is heading for a slump. The complexities of the international situation seem unfamiliar to all. The future is uncertain and an economic crisis is looming on the horizon.

The Future Is Post-Western

This current chapter of Western-run human history must be flung shut.

Yannick Giovanni Marshall

e need a global cultural revolution. A bringing to a sudden end this halfmillennia long faith healing show where a perspiring West preaches humanistic values and economic prosperity while cutting holes in the pockets of an entranced colonised world.

We need not only an end to the world order set up by Western hegemony but an end to the appreciation of the West. We need the rage we feel after looking out at the charred remains of our earth under centuries of Western rule to mature into an act. The act of putting the West aside.

There must be an ushering in of a new day on earth where pulling our bodies, our lives, our lands back from the hammer-pry of colonialism is not deliberately misreported as "clashes' where white racists who deliberately hunt and deliberately kill Black elders in communities deliberately ruined by white racists are not immediately comfort-blanketed with reports of being "troubled". Where our chanting to be allowed to live – and the inevitable procession of mourners come down upon by apartheid's police forces are no longer deliberately misframed as culture wars or intractable conflicts. This current chapter of Western-run human history must be flung

We should have been more desperate for a post-Western world. A world where it is odd for white-skinned refugees to have every type of door flung open for them at the sight of their Primark shopping bags while it is routine for darker-skinned refugees to be force-fed toilet water in the American borderlands or sold on Libyan slave auction blocks

Odd, reporters openly calling for guerrilla resistance against oppression in Ukraine while the killing of Black people whether by drone strikes in Yemen or by an American in a grocery store must be responded to with pacifism.

Odd. Not hypocritical. Unintelligible. Dark-skinned refugees horsewhipped by American border agents in cowboy hats. Shot at by Europeans while on unseaworthy crafts sutured together with Hadiths and Psalms. Pointed at to explain resurgent Nazi sentiment. Ordered to let white people board first during evacuations. Referred to as crime waves and invaders while flaxen-haired refugees benefit from Fortune 500 company fundraisers, Airbnb programmes and win singing contests. Odd. Not hypocritical. Unintelligible.

It must be accepted now that the West, however mythologised, be it American-led "democracy" or classical "Western" political ideas, has proven that it does not have the necessary intellectual or political infrastructure to put down its perpetually rising Nazism. It has proven inadequate to the task of not harming the vast majority of humanity. Its ideas and institutions have proven incapable of destroying and ridding itself of colonial racism – if it is to be accepted that the project of the West is something other than the project of colonial racism.

The apologists will bring you Locke and Rousseau and protest that the West brought you life, liberty and the social contract. They are careful not to reveal that in the Atlantic Ocean of the fine print, sharks were learning to trail the slave ships, waiting like yelping dogs for the feast of live Africans dumped over the starboard side. They will say we brought you the telegraph and the railway but will not mention the jokes they made at the indentured South Asians they sent to be mauled by lions in East Africa as they laid the tracks. Nor their hunting of families in Tasmania, nor the women abused at the Kamiti concentration camp accused, like the American "negress", of subverting the aims of the settler state. They will say one-day delivery but say nothing about the suicide-prevention nets and the urine in driver's bottles to keep up the pace.

Whatever it takes to leave racism and thus hatred of the vast majority of people on the earth behind, the Western world does not possess and will never possess. That alone disqualifies it from continuing any further.

And if we are wrong, if a non-racist enlightenment is indeed, for real this time, just around the corner, if it only takes a bit more patience as the liberal has promised since hansom cabs and the French Revolution then let us jump the gun. They are not the only ones allowed to be too hasty. Let us rid ourselves of association with the West, even if it is in error. Become too rushed, too reckless in our leaving it. Commit oversights. Forget to include the West in the vision of the future as if it were a slave in their declarations and charters and constitutions. Let us be dogs no longer satisfied to chase after the mechanical rabbit. Hang tomorrow. Arrest patience. White supremacists are not the only ones who get to make the world. The wretched of the earth can seize the reins and are free to crash the horse.

The West is kept in the breast pocket of every one-man race riot the colony provides with an AR-15. In a locket of every in-training genocidaire assisted by the algorithms of tech profiteers who look the other way as convincingly as the port cities of the triangular trade. Nudged along by a hate group accepted as a political party and the television personalities of a white nationalist media empire more impactful than all of the early 20th century lynch mob-inciting US newspapers combined.

Wherever there is a group touting Western civilisation and values an ethnic slur is not far behind. An unfairly graded Black student, a pogrom-preparing fascist club is not far behind. If that group praises the West as the champion of women's rights, it will also lead the charge to end those rights. Where it celebrates Western humanism it will be the first to dehumanise. Values its secularism it will crusade. Western cosmopolitanism? Inclusivity? It will volunteer as border minutemen. Where it celebrates Western rationality and scientific advancement it will cling to biological determinism and the racial classificatory charts of the 1700s. "The West" is a Trojan horse for the racist.

The West is trafficked on the dark web and 8chan, Twitch and sung by all the new Nazi parties. Pounded at the lecterns of celebrity racist professors and top podcast hosts who are carried atop shoulders of incels who blame caricatures of "the Blacks" for their perceived lack of desirability instead of the stench of their expired worldview. Well, let there indeed be a "Clash of Civilisations", or rather a clash of the Western traditionalists who hold that the colonised can be hurt with impunity and the anti-colonial world. The post-Western world. An insurrection of the good equipped not with open arms and listening, but rubbish bins.

It is time for putting aside the West. Abandoning the sycophantic enthralment with their architecture, croissants smeared with contraband West African chocolate, and end to lusting after their fashion brands. A devaluing of their political institutions as far as their political institutions have devalued our lives. Smash the crystal wine glasses, case the cello, drop the overvaluation of all things "European" so that its stock market crashes in a way that it can never

A cultural revolution is not a sideline cause when Occidentophilia excavates mental and economic resources more efficiently than their mining corporations steal raw materials. When it fuels fascism and leads Indigenous libraries to a self-immolation that burns more brightly than a crop-dusting of agent orange. When it makes resistance hesitant.

The colonised's admiration of the West is fatal. It seconds the white supremacists' supremacism. Confirms for them that they are indeed right pulling our people from evacuation transport because they are superior. That their innocents' deaths shall launch a thousand warships and ours a stern comment about how the right is mainstreaming extremist rhetoric. It affirms for the race "massacrist" in training that the West is indeed coveted and they are right to leave us dying in the streets, struggling in cuffs, or warehoused in prisons. It buoys every racist commenter that responds to the dishevelled migrants fleeing from colonial violence with "if we are so bad why are people crossing our borders". It tells them it is indeed the moral superiority of the West that we are running to. Not the ruins of imperialism. Not the wars they have implanted, cultivated and nurtured. The forests they've set alight.

'Now, comrades, now is the time to decide to change sides ... We must abandon our dreams and say farewell to our old beliefs and former friendships. Let us not lose time in useless laments or sickening mimicry. Let us leave this Europe which never stops talking of man yet massacres him at every one of its street corners, at every corner of the world.'

Now. Now is the time. Now at the junction of the climate's end and the unlimited takeover attempts their liberal governments grant fascists. When Congolese are killed after Western traffic stops, when the Congo is killed by Western mining corps, it is full passed the time. When their most reputable papers misrepresent the killing and the funeral of a journalist. When our people are killed for existing. It is time.

They cannot quit colonialism. Leave this West. Let us see if we cannot build a world on mangos and abolition.

Far from Smart City

t is evident that development in Kashmir happens on a very passive scale. We are too far from what a 'smart city' should be like. Kashmir is not even properly developed as a 'city' as of yet, leave apart being a smart city. One of the many loopholes is the deteriorating condition of the roads. Almost every road in the city has developed potholes and craters, causing severe inconvenience to road users every day. The authorities seem to pay no heed to this issue. The condition of the roads is deteriorating more and more day by day, while no one takes any notice. While several roads have remained damaged for a long period of time, the condition of these roads keeps deteriorating every year after seasonal rains and snowfall, and it should be an annual practice to mend the roads but alas these roads have remained damaged from years now. In fact, even during the process of building roads or repair work, the authorities don't seem to pay any heed to the quality of construction material or labour work either. Also, while the poor condition of roads causes inconvenience to commuters, it also becomes a cause for many accidents. To improve the condition of roads, the government should give contracts for making roads to only those contractors who assure quality work and give guarantee of repairing roads within stipulated time frame. The authorities concerned should make a separate inspection team for roads whose main responsibility should be maintaining the quality of roads throughout the city. The government must start doing what it is actually supposed to do, and take steps to maintain Kashmir as a city before opting to make it a 'smart eading is likely to become a habit and necessity at the same time. It might help someone find ways to solve some big riddles of life. For others, it can turn into an addictive practice – reading for the sake of pleasure. The aim, purpose and meaning of reading could be different for different people. An old dictum 'we are what we eat' might be replaced by a new one: 'we are what we read and how we define our reading'. Both the content and aim of our reading decisively influence, in an interactive way, our perception of life, events and universe. A book and the way we read it can change our worldview and nurture new emotions. Pleasure is arguably one of the strongest drives behind most of our pursuits.

At times, it grows so strong that it can surpass the principle of reality. Fight and flight are termed as two most common behaviours of all living beings; they either wrestle with or run away from danger. In deciding to fight the danger, you go with the principle of reality; in choosing escape you vote for the principle of pleasure. Fighting is meant to putting your best abilities to test in quite uncertain conditions. On the other hand, seeking pleasure merely means seeking a place to hide and nourishing your ego.

All pleasure-seekers are egotists. The people who read books for the sake of pleasure build a fort where their ego acts like a king — a king who only listens. In Italo Kalvino's A King Listens, the King is asked to stay immobile and just listen. "The head must be held immobile; always remember that the crown is balanced on your pate, you cannot pull it over your ears like a cap on a windy day". The head used to enjoying the heady idea of reading remains immobile. It relishes ecstatic rhythms, descriptions, narrations even some ideas found in books but

Moving is thinking, a preferring of cerebral hunt to intuitive pursue. When you take a book as an event, you affirm that that event needs to be comprehended at two levels: sensual and cerebral. At a sensual level, a book might be equally pleasurable and painful; it can arouse pleasant or/and bad feelings; it may make you feel optimistic or/and pessimistic about the things addressed in it. It is the way the book not only engages your most powerful part of being but also takes you into the mode of fight, into interrogating things courageously. When you decide to fight there are equal chances of success and failure: joy of victory or melancholy of defeat.

An egotist, necessarily surrounded by quirky emotions, is scared of defeat, of an error a thinking mind can commit. In case of defeat or error, he or she strives to justify it by some sort of 'logic'. Ali Jawad Zaidi in the following couplet seems to bespeak pleasureseekers' logic to validate their failures.

Who says we came empty handed from the company of our beloved. We got pleasure of ache and revelry of feeling from there. Comprehending books at sensual level moves us into the cerebral plane, where we negotiate with and interrogate their themes, their ways of argumentation and the reasons of choosing one particular style by their authors. Books 'produce' knowledge, feelings, perceptions and meanings by employing culturally acquired human faculties.

If we avoid interrogating how books make us feel or perceive things, we subscribe to the idea that knowledge transmitted through books is sacredly ultimate and unchallengeable, not mundanely transitory. At the cerebral plane, a book proffers a certain type of belief: whatever we come across in a society was humanly generated and it can only be understood and dealt with through humanly produced texts. Pleasure-seekers take all these things for granted.

than 5% of accounts are fakes or spammers, commonly referred to as "bots." Since his offer to buy Twitter was accepted, Elon Musk has repeatedly questioned these estimates, even dismissing Chief Executive Officer Parag Agrawal's public response.

Later, Musk put the deal on hold and demanded more proof. So why are people arguing about the percentage of bot accounts on

As the creators of Botometer, a widely used bot detection tool, our group at the Indiana University Observatory on Social Media has been studying inauthentic accounts and manipulation on social media for over a decade. We brought the concept of the "social bot" to the foreground and first estimated their prevalence on Twitter in 2017.

Based on our knowledge and experience, we believe that estimating the percentage of bots on Twitter has become a very difficult task, and debating the accuracy of the estimate might be missing the point. Here is why. What, exactly, is a bot?

To measure the prevalence of problematic accounts on Twitter, a clear definition of the targets is necessary. Common terms such as "fake accounts," "spam accounts" and "bots" are used interchangeably, but they have different meanings. Fake or false accounts are those that impersonate people. Accounts that mass-produce unsolicited promotional content are defined as spammers. Bots, on the other hand, are accounts controlled in part by software; they may post content or carry out simple interactions, like retweeting, automati-

These types of accounts often overlap. For instance, you can create a bot that impersonates a human to post spam automatically. Such an account is simultaneously a bot, a spammer and a fake. But not every fake account is a bot or a spammer, and vice versa. Coming up with an estimate without a clear definition only yields misleading results.

Defining and distinguishing account types can also inform proper interventions. Fake and spam accounts degrade the online environment and violate platform policy. Malicious bots are used to spread misinformation, inflate popularity, exacerbate conflict through negative and inflammatory content, manipulate opinions, influence elections, conduct financial fraud and disrupt communication. However, some bots can be harmless or even useful, for example by helping disseminate news, delivering disaster alerts and conducting research.

Simply banning all bots is not in the best interest of social media

For simplicity, researchers use the term "inauthentic accounts" to refer to the collection of fake accounts, spammers and malicious

Another difficulty is posed by coordinated accounts that appear to be normal individually but act so similarly to each other that they are almost certainly controlled by a single entity. Yet they are like needles in the haystack of hundreds of millions of daily tweets. Finally, inauthentic accounts can evade detection by techniques like swapping handles or automatically posting and deleting large volumes of content.

The distinction between inauthentic and genuine accounts gets more and more blurry. Accounts can be hacked, bought or rented, and some users "donate" are controlled by both algorithms and humans. Similarly, spammers sometimes post legitimate content to obscure their activity. We have observed a broad spectrum of behaviors mixing the

their credentials to organizations who post on their behalf. As a recharacteristics of bots and people. Estimating the prevalence of inauthentic accounts requires applying a simplistic binary classification: authentic or inauthentic account. No matter where the line is drawn, mistakes are inevitable.

Missing the big picture

The focus of the recent debate on estimating the number of Twitter bots oversimplifies the issue and misses the point of quantifying the harm of online abuse and manipulation by inauthentic accounts.

Through BotAmp, a new tool from the Botometer family that anyone with a Twitter account can use, we have found that the presence of automated activity is not evenly distributed. For instance, the discussion about cryptocurrencies tends to show more bot activity than the discussion about cats. Therefore, whether the overall prevalence is 5% or 20% makes little difference to individual users; their experiences with these accounts depend on whom they follow and the topics they care about.

Recent evidence suggests that inauthentic accounts might not be the only culprits responsible for the spread of misinformation, hate speech, polarization and radicalization. These issues typically involve many human users. For instance, our analysis shows that misinformation about COVID-19 was disseminated overtly on both Twitter and Facebook by verified, high-profile accounts.

Even if it were possible to precisely estimate the prevalence of inauthentic accounts, this would do little to solve these problems. A meaningful first step would be to acknowledge the complex nature of these issues. This will help social media platforms and policymakers develop meaningful responses.

Arson in Andhra Town Over Renaming District, Minister's House Torched

Press Trust of India

Amaravati: Arson broke out in Amalapuram town in Andhra Pradesh on Tuesday when police resorted to lathi-charge at people who staged a protest against the proposed renaming of the newly-created Konaseema district as B R Ambedkar Konaseema district, with a number of police personnel left injured and the protestors opposed to the name change allegedly setting the houses of state minister P Viswarupu and a ruling YSR Congress MLA P Satish on fire.

While the ruling party blamed unnamed forces behind the arson, all opposition parties hit out at the Jagan Mohan Reddy government over its "gross failure" in controlling the situation. The opposition parties appealed to people to observe restraint and ensure peace returned to Konaseema.

State Home Minister Taneti Vanitha said some 20 police personnel were injured in stone pelting by the mob while the protestors torched a school bus. Prohibitory orders under Section 144 CrPC were clamped in Amalapuram even as additional police forces were rushed in to bring the situation under control.

Eluru Range Deputy Inspector General of Police G Pala Raju, who rushed to Amalapuram, said they were observing restraint and trying to bring the situation under control. He said the injured police personnel were "not in danger."

Trouble started when the police allegedly prevented leaders of the Konaseema Sadhana Samiti from going into the district Collector's office for submitting a memorandum against renaming the district and resorted to a lathi-charge

The Samiti was opposed to the proposed renaming of the newlycreated Konaseema district as B R Ambedkar Konaseema district.

As police tried to chase the Samiti leaders and workers away, stone pelting ensued. As trouble broke out, shops in the town downed their shutters even as the protestors allegedly went berserk and first set a school bus on fire.

They later went to the house of Transport Minister Viswarupu and torched it. Sensing trouble, police had by then moved the family members of the ministers out to safety.

Later, the protestors targeted Mummidivaram MLA Ponnada Satish's residence and set it on fire.

"It was such a horrifying thing when a mob of 1,000-1,500 persons came and burnt our house. They were carrying petrol in bottles, which clearly indicated that they did all this intentionally," Satish said.

He and his family members were, however, moved to safety.

The state Home Minister Vanitha told reporters at the Secretariat here that some parties and anti-social elements apparently instigated the arson. "It is unfortunate that over 20 police personnel sustained injuries in the incident. We will conduct a thorough investigation into the incident and bring the culprits to book," she added.

Principal opposition Telugu Desam Party, BJP, Jana Sena and the Congress hit out at the government over its gross failure in controlling the Amalapuram situation.

"The arson in Konaseema, known for its peace, is unfortunate. The Home Minister made baseless allegations on a delicate issue. This is completely a failure of the government and the police," Telugu Desam chief N Chandrababu Naidu said in a statement.

Jana Sena chief K Pawan Kalyan lashed out at the Home Minister for blaming the opposition parties over the Amalapuram incidents.

"It is nothing but an effort to cover up the government's failure in maintaining law and order. The ruling party is only seeking to push the blame on to the opposition to cover its failures," Kalyan said.

State BJP president Somu Veerraju strongly condemned the incidents and blamed the government for failing to ensure peace.

The government should take responsibility for its failure to maintain peace in Konaseema," he added.

State Congress president Sake Sailajanath too blamed the government over this. Former Director General of Police V Dinesh Reddy, too, found fault with the police.

"Instead of blaming I can say it is failure of police. (When I was) DGP of combined AP, such incidents were never allowed to boomerang on this scale," Dinesh Reddy said in a social media post.

He recalled that he worked as SP of the erstwhile East Godavari district for a long period and people of Konaseema were found to be peaceloving. "I am shocked at the turn of events," he added.

On April 4, the new Konaseema district was carved out of the erstwhile East Godavari.

Last week, the state government issued a preliminary notification seeking to rename Konaseema as B R Ambedkar Konaseema district and invited objections, if any, from the

A week later, Constable Reyaz Ahmad Thoker was shot dead inside his house in Gudoora village on May 13.

Qadri was with his daughter Safa when militants fired at him at a point blank range outside his house. Safa may not have been on the target of the militants as the initial report suggests that when the first bullet hit Qadri, his daughter may have anxiously hugged her father and in the same breath, the second bullet supposedly for Saifullah, hit her right arm," a police source told Kashmir Observer.

The initial probe, the source noted, also suggests that at least 3 militants may have been involved in this incident.

As per sources, Qadri, who was currently serving in the I&K Police's Special Operation Group (SOG), was fired at least 4 times from a pistol at a point blank range.

If sources are to be believed, then several SOG personnel including Qadri had already been warned to avoid visiting home for a few days.

Qadri, he said, succumbed to his injuries at the hospital while the condition of his daughter is stated to be stable.

"Police has registered a case under relevant sections of law and initiated investigation. Officers continue to work to establish the full circumstances of the terror crime while the whole area has been cordoned off with the help of reinforcement and search in the area is going on," the spokesperson said.

Talking to journalists on the sidelines of the wreath laying ceremony of slain policeman, Inspector General of Police (IGP) Kashmir, Vijay Kumar said that the "perpetrators of this barbaric terror act" will be brought to justice very

He also said that entire society including families of the militants should condemn the attacks on unarmed policeman and her nineyear-old daughter.

Poaching and habitat destruction, experts believe, are the two major activities that are responsible for the decline in their population.

The male musk deer are mainly poached because of their scent glands—considered more valuable than gold—used to produce perfumes and traditional medicine.

Markhors

Markhor is the world's largest species of wild goat having a limited geographical distribution in India, Pakistan, Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan, and Tajikistan. In India, the wild goat species is only found in Jammu & Kashmir. According to a survey conducted by Wildlife Trust India in 2004-05, 35 markhor groups comprising of 155 individuals were sighted in Hirpura and Kazinag.

The survey mentions that poaching has been the main threat to markhors in J&K due to which the wild goats were reduced to near extermination.

Most of the areas where markhors were found were inaccessible during winters due to heavy snowfall which helped the locals to kill it for meat, mentions the survey, adding, "Markhor meat is locally regarded as the tastiest wild meat.'

According to the survey, shelling along the Line of Control (LoC) for many years has also affected the population of markhors.

Another similar report about the status of markhors in J&K, states that intensive grazing by the livestock of Bakkarwals has made the areas inaccessible to markhors which has led to the shrinking of the available habitat space for the wild goat. Snow Leopards

The species are found in the higher Himalayan and trans-Himalayan landscape at an altitude between 3,000 and 5,400 meters.

Within India, they're found in J&K, Himachal Pradesh, Uttarakhand, Sikkim, and Arunachal Pradesh

According to a research by Supriya Bhatt, India's leopard population has declined by 75-90% between 120 and 200 years owing to threats such as the depletion of prey population, destruction of habitat, human-leopard conflict, and poaching.

"Widespread conversion of the biodiversity-rich habitats into land for cultivation and human habitation has resulted in extensive habitat loss for wildlife including leopard," mentions the study by Athar Noor on the density of leopard in the forest of Dachigam National Park and north-western Himalaya."The low densities of prey represent an alarming status of the species.'

Another cause for the decline of the population of snow leopard is human-wildlife conflict. According to Census 2011, Jammu & Kashmir has a population of 1.25 crores as compared to a population of 1.01 crore in 2001, leading to an increase in land demand, food, raw materials, and many other resources that are procured at the cost of nature.
