Auqib Javed

Srinagar: The National Green Tribunal (NGT) has constituted a high-profile committee headed by Secretary Central Pollution Control Board (CPCB) to ascertain the "correct factual situation" in Achan dumping site in Srinagar city.

For decades, residents of the vicinity, including those in the downtown area of Srinagar, have complained about the "unscientific" dumping of waste in the former wetland. This dumping has resulted in a persistent foul smell emanating from the site, causing several health issues.

The Srinagar city generates around 600 metric tons of garbage, which is collected by the Srinagar Municipal Corporation (SMC) and deposited at Achan.

The locals allege that solid waste is not being treated in a scientific way. However, the SMC claimed to have taken several measures including spraying anti-odor chemicals at the dumping site to control the smell.

The matter has finally landed up in the NGT. A petition has been filed by noted RTI activist Dr. Raja Muzaffar Bhat, seeking directions from the authorities to take necessary measures so that the people of Srinagar get some relief from the Achan Landfill site.

The NGT in its order has directed the committee to ascertain the correct ground position and the extent of pollution caused by the illegal dumping at the landfill site in question, consequential alth hazard created by it. | More on P6

Srinagar: The J&K unit of Bhartiya Janata Party (BJP) today hit streets in Srinagar against the recent killing of its worker and former Sarpanch by militants in Shopian district, accusing the district administration of ignoring the party's repeated pleas for the security of the slain Sarpanch.

Carrying placards that read "stop innocent killings, Pakistan muradabad and bring perpetrators to book", dozens of saffron party workers and activists took out a protest rally from party headquarters in Jawahar Nagar, demanding justice for the slain party worker.

Shouting anti Pakistan slogans, the protesters also set effigy of the Prime Minister of Pakistan on fire, claiming the militant's carryout such acts at the behest of their masters from across the border.

The protesting BJP workers also accused the Shopian district administration of ignoring repeated pleas to provide safe accommodation and security to the vulnerable BJP workers in Shopian district.

Despite repeated requests, the Deputy Commissioner (DC) concerned, they alleged, did not bother to provide security to the slain BJP worker, making him a soft target for militants.

The protesters demanded a thorough inquiry against the DC Shopian for allegedly refusing to provide security to Aijaz Ahmad Sheikh.

"The aim of holding this protest is to show solidarity with the family of the deceased Sarpanch. We at the same time demand an inquiry against DC Shopian. The party had intimidated him about some key functionaries facing militant threats; however, he did not take any measure to avert the threat" BJP district president, Ashok Bhat told reporters.

Sheikh, he said, was not just a dedicated party worker but a true patriot who persisted in his efforts to strengthen the party in the Shopian district despite being confronted by extremist forces.

"In case the administration did not hold an inquiry, the party workers from across Srinagar would march towards Shopian soon. We will take all necessary steps to drive extremist elements off Kashmir and won't let terrorism to thrive in J&K again," he added.

Baramulla Vote

The voter turnout in the Baramulla constituency of the Kashmir Valley marks a significant departure from the past. For years, the Kashmiri electorate has grappled with a complex relationship with electoral processes, often marked by boycotts by separatist groups. There were other factors in play such as disillusionment, separatist sentiment, and violence. However, the turnout exceeding 54 percent in Baramulla Lok Sabha constituency reflects a profound change, reflecting the changing aspirations and political dynamics within Kashmir.

Historically, elections in Kashmir have been marred by low voter turnout, fueled by deep-seated grievances and a sense of alienation from mainstream political institutions. The call for boycotts, often endorsed by separatist leaders, reflected a widespread sentiment of discontent. The security concerns, further deterred many from exercising their franchise.

In this context, the recent surge in voter participation in Baramulla holds symbolic significance. It reflects a growing willingness among Kashmiris to engage with democratic mechanisms. The turnout, particularly noteworthy in the backdrop of the fiercely contested electoral battle, shows a desire for representation and the recognition of electoral politics as an avenue for shaping governance.

The advent of new political voices further highlights the shifting dynamics in Kashmir's politics. The entry of the jailed Sheikh Rashid Ahmad into the fray injected a new energy into the electoral arena. His son Abrar Rashid was able to mobilize massive support across the North Kashmir.

Moreover, the participation of women, evident in the queues outside polling stations was a sight to behold. Women, long marginalized in politics, are increasingly asserting their agency and contributing to the democratic process.

The electoral contest in Baramulla also reflects the complex interplay of the new politics in the Valley. The realignment of political alliances, the emergence of new political actors, and the reconfiguration of electoral constituencies following the delimitation exercise have reshaped the political calculus in the region. The contest between established parties like the National Conference and Peoples Democratic Party, alongside the Peoples Conference and Awami Ittehad Party, added an element of drama to the campaign, involving people even more.

However, while the uptick in voter participation is a positive development, it also underlines the enduring challenges and unresolved issues facing Kashmir. The electoral process alone cannot address the deep-seated grievances and aspirations of the Kashmiri people. Sustainable peace and stability require a comprehensive approach that addresses political, economic, and social dimensions, while respecting the rights and dignity of all stakeholders.

Political Liquidity in Kashmir

Dr . Fayaz Ahmad Bhat

It is the first time since the 1989 elections in Kashmir that people of Kashmir especially in the North division of the valley are actively involved and interested in the Indian parliamentary elections.

Generally, elections and the electoral process in Kashmir have not been popular. It seems that the scrapping of Article 370 and 35A of the Indian constitution has changed the political discourse and trajectory in the valley. It is worth mentioning that article 370 and 35 of the Indian constitution had provided special status to the state of Jammu and Kashmir. It has covert dimensions of social and cultural preservation besides political relation of the state with that of India.

On 5th of August 2019, the Bharatiya Janta Party led by Shri Narendra Modi not only revoked the special status of the state but also took away its statehood. The revocation was followed by a prolonged lull in the valley due to curfews, arrests and a complete communication blackout. The Modi government justified this by saying that the move was motivated by the intention of avoiding civilian casualties.

Among the arrestees was Er. Abdul Rashid Sheikh, who had contested elections and was the people's representative in the state legislature from Handwara Langate. Although his actions and theatrics often caught the attention, however, the antics did not translate to his popularity outside Handwara.

His arrest too had had little impact, however, some analysts had predicted some impact of it. Dr Adfer Rashid Shah, a Delhi based Sociologists and political commentator on Kashmir, in an informal interaction had noted, "Engineer has a great impact on people and this can be inferred from local gatherings. People in personal gatherings curse people of Kashmir for not doing anything for his release."

However, In the changed political and administrative set up people had their own logic and calculation behind the silence. In the post revocation scenario, people resigned into silence for various reasons. There have been no mass gatherings, hartals (strikes) protests or other forms of resistance which were otherwise a "normal" routine in Kashmir.

As the parliamentary elections knocked the door in Kashmir this time, the difference was noticeable. The participation of people was palpable. The political. It has been the first time since 1989 when there has been no call for election boycott or forced voting threat. The frozen political pot in Kashmir was seen melting each day of the election process.

The filing and acceptance of application by Er Abdul Rashid Sheikh for Barahmulla Parliamentary seat started to generate some heat. The campaign by two sons of the jailed contestant not only managed to melt the frozen political pot in North Kashmir but it also started to garner heat in the entire Kashmir region.

The rallies carried out by his two sons received great public support. In the past, the gathering of people in rallies was not something new or conclusive in Kashmir. In the past, there were people who participated in one political rally in the morning and shifted allegiances to another one (of the opponent) in the evening.

However, the present gatherings of people in the rallies of jailed contestants has a different meaning and interpretation. The huge participation of people in support of Er. Rashid in Naidkhai, Sonawari, which is the native Village of sitting National Conference Parliamentarian, has many sociological dimensions. The gathering in the political rally of a jailed person who apparently has no power and influence in native Village of a sitting parliamentarian who overtly has power, connections and influence is quite interesting.

This behavior of the people can be termed as Weberian Affectual Action. In the context of traditional societies, in the light of Almond and Verbs theories, Affectual action can play a pivotal role in politics.

The observations and interactions had impressed that there would be a huge voter turnout for the Baramulla Parliamentary seat and this prediction has proven to be true. The Baramullah constituency saw an all-time high voter turnout of 59%. The boycott belts may have also participated in the electoral process.

Whatever may be the outcome of the elections but Er. Rashid has been able to unfreeze the frozen political pot. It has provided a space for the liquid to spill in a productive direction.

The SIP Magic and Power of Compounding

Did You Know?

Irshad Mushtaq

Systematic Investment Plan (SIP) in mutual funds is widely considered one of the best ways to save money and invest wisely in today's financial market.

By setting aside a fixed amount of money on a regular basis, investors can take advantage of the power of compounding and dollar-cost averaging to build wealth over time. This method not only helps in developing a disciplined saving habit but also minimizes the impact of market volatility on their investments.

First and foremost, SIP allows investors to benefit from the principle of compounding. By investing a fixed amount at regular intervals, investors can earn returns not only on their principal investment but also on the returns generated. This compounding effect can significantly boost the overall growth of the investment portfolio over the long term. As the investment horizon increases, the power of compounding becomes more pronounced, leading to exponential growth in wealth.

Additionally, SIP helps in mitigating the impact of market volatility on investments through a strategy known as dollar-cost averaging. Instead of trying to time the market or make lump-sum investments, investors can spread out their investments over time, buying more units when prices are low and fewer units when prices are high. This strategy helps in reducing the impact of market fluctuations and allows investors to benefit from the long-term growth potential of equities.

Moreover, SIP offers investors the flexibility to start with a small investment amount and gradually increase it over time as their income grows. This makes it accessible to a wide range of investors, including young professionals, salaried individuals, and retirees, who may have varying financial goals and risk appetites. By starting early and staying invested for the long term, investors can accumulate a substantial corpus for achieving their financial objectives, such as retirement planning, buying a house, or funding their children's education.

In conclusion, SIP in mutual funds is an effective and efficient way to save money and invest wisely for the future. The Baramullah constituency saw an all-time high voter turnout of 59%. The boycott belts may have also participated in the electoral process

Drones for Agriculture

Drones, or unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs) are becoming increasingly popular in India's agricultural sector. Drones offer a range of benefits to farmers, like improved efficiency, and enhanced crop yields. However, there are challenges as well that may hinder the adoption of drone technology such as fear of job loss, lack of knowledge and training, and regulatory barriers. Drones can capture high-resolution images and provide information on crop health, growth, and yield. This can help farmers to identify issues early and take corrective measures to optimize their inputs and outputs. But, drones are expensive, and many farmers may not have the financial resources to invest in this technology. Hence, there is a need for more subsidies and incentives, and economical financing options to make drones more affordable and attractive to farmers. It requires a coordinated effort from the government, the industry, farmers and the civil society to create a conducive and supportive environment for the use of drones in agriculture. There is little doubt that drones can be a powerful tool for transforming Indian agriculture and ensuring the country's food security and prosperity.

Education Over Fame, A Lesson for Parents

His decision to value education over fleeting fame serves as a powerful reminder that the greatest legacy we can leave for our children is not measured in likes and followers but in the knowledge, values, and wisdom we impart to them

Shirazi Village Vlogs is a viral content creator from Pakistan. His content is widely popular in India as well

Ikkz Iqbal

Pakistan's youngest vlogger, Muhammad Shiraz along with his little sister Muskan, featuring on a YouTube channel Shirazi Village Vlogs, recently posted a video on YouTube about his decision to leave YouTube.

Shiraz explained his decision to leave YouTube stating that his father wants him to focus on his education instead of vlogging. Accompanied by his younger sister, Muskan, Shiraz conveyed the message to his followers that he will no longer continue vlogging as his father has advised him to dedicate his time to studies and avoid making videos.

Shiraz has achieved remarkable success on YouTube in a very short period of time.

In a world where fame and fortune often overshadow the virtues of education and personal development, one man stands as a beacon of hope and integrity.

Mohammad Taqi, a Pakistani famous youtuber and a vlogger and the proud father of the sensational duo Shirazi and Muskaan, has made a monumental decision that has left many in awe. He chose to end the thriving vlogging journey of his children, which was raking in high as per the revenue generated per month, to prioritize their education and future well-being.

The Shirazi Village Vlogs, featuring the heartwarming adventures of little Mohammad Shiraz and his adorable baby sister Muskaan, had captured the hearts of millions. With 1.57 million subscribers on YouTube and 2.1 million followers on Instagram, Shiraz became one of the most talked-about vloggers in the YouTube world in a very short period of time. Their popularity soared to such heights that Shiraz even had the honor of meeting Pakistan Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and he recently also met with former Pakistani cricketer Shoaib Akhtar. Muhammad Shiraz holds the distinction of being Pakistan's youngest vlogger. Hailing from the outskirts of Siachen in the village of Gurse, he gained recognition by showcasing the picturesque scenery of his village and establishing his unique identity among people.

Yet, amidst the glitz and glamour of social media stardom, Mohammad Taqi recognized a deeper calling. He understood that education is not merely a means to secure a job but a fundamental tool for the holistic development and modification of behavior. In a powerful and emotional 11-minute "last vlog" shared on May 15, young Shiraz bid farewell to his fans, explaining that his father wanted him to focus on his studies instead of the transient allure of vlogging.

In an era where parents often strive to make their children viral sensations, Mohammad Taqi's decision is nothing short of revolutionary. He has shown that while money can buy many things, it cannot replace the lasting value of education. His sacrifice is a testament to his unwavering belief that education is paramount and that true success lies not in fleeting fame but in the enduring knowledge and character it builds.

The financial figures only amplify the magnitude of this sacrifice. It is worth notable that Mohammad Shiraz was earning a significant sum from his videos ranging around 50 to 60 lakh PKR. Yet, for Mohammad Taqi, the future of his children is priceless. He has proven that he is a father of unparalleled bravery and wisdom, willing to forgo immense wealth for the sake of his children's education and future.

Mohammad Taqi's choice is a grand salute to the power of education over materialism. It is a clarion call to parents everywhere, reminding them that the ultimate gift they can give their children is not fame or fortune, but the tools to build a successful, educated, and well-rounded life. In this act of supreme selflessness, Mohammad Taqi has etched his name in the annals of history as a true hero and an exemplary father.

As Shiraz and Muskaan embark on their new journey, free from the pressures of vlogging, they carry with them the invaluable lesson that their father has imparted. They will grow up knowing that while their moment in the social media spotlight was bright, the light of education and knowledge will illuminate their path for a lifetime. Mohammad Taqi, through his courageous decision, has set a precedent that will inspire countless others to follow in his footsteps, proving once and for all that education is the cornerstone of a brighter future.

In a world obsessed with the ephemeral nature of social media fame, the story of Mohammad Taqi and his children stands as a timeless testament to the enduring power of education and parental love. It reminds us all that true heroism lies not in the pursuit of wealth, but in the sacrifices made for the betterment of those we love. Here's to Mohammad Taqi, a father who has redefined what it means to be a true hero.

Let this story inspire us to prioritize what truly matters in life. His decision to value education over fleeting fame serves as a powerful reminder that the greatest legacy we can leave for our children is not measured in likes and followers, but in the knowledge, values, and wisdom we impart to them. As we navigate our own paths, may we all find the courage to make the difficult choices that pave the way for a brighter, more meaningful future for the next generation.

Venting Your Emotions at Work: Helpful or Harmful?

Michael W Wiederman

Disappointment, frustration, anger — these are just some of the negative emotions you are liable to feel at some point at work. When you experience an intense undesirable emotion, you might choose to express it to a coworker. People talk about the need to "vent" the emotion, meaning taking the time to express it with the goal of lessening its intensity. "Blowing off steam" is a phrase sometimes used.

Venting is a common practice, but does it result in more harm or good? Like many questions in psychology, the most accurate answer is probably, "It depends." In this case, it's important to consider such factors as how, who, when, where, and with what goal.

How and With What Goal

Emotions are physiological experiences that are caused by perceptions or thoughts. If you somehow immediately shut off the thoughts, the physiological emotion, or bodily experience, would subside in a matter of seconds to minutes. What keeps an emotional experience alive is continued thinking about it. So one risk of venting is continually reliving the undesirable emotion. This is particularly likely if venting consists of simply repeating the events, focusing on the "wrongness" of what happened, and so forth.

If this kind of thinking perpetuates the negative emotional experience, why do we do it? We all like to be right, and having a prime example to feel self-righteous can be tempting bait. If we've been wronged, being the victim has its privileges, such as sympathy, and focusing attention on the negatives of others rather than ourselves.

What might more productive venting look like? It might be helpful to share with coworkers what happened, and how you feel about it, with the aim of examining your perspective. Often when we vent to coworkers we are seeking validation of our perspective; that we're right for feeling this way. Supportive coworkers may oblige, either out of sincere empathy or a sense of pressure to agree. Instead, look for alternative interpretations, and ask your coworkers for the same. It's not that you need to agree with alternative views, but even considering them helps break the grip of the belief that your interpretation or experience is necessarily 100% right, that the wrongdoers are 100% evil, and so forth.

When and to Whom

Typically the need to vent is when the emotion is hottest. That makes sense. The risk is that in the heat of the moment you may say things that you later regret, or that at least might be taken out of context if shared later by your coworkers. Taking any amount of time to calm yourself, even just a few minutes, may be beneficial in giving you more conscious control over what you share and how it comes across.

In the heat of the moment, there may be a temptation to vent to the first available ear. However, can that particular coworker be trusted? Do you expect confidentiality? What is their relationship to the person, people, or situation about which you're venting? Might your sharing your negative emotions about these affect your relationship with this particular coworker?

Where

Your workplace is familiar territory. You spend so much time there it feels like your space, and you naturally have grown desensitized to many aspects of the environment. A risk is that you may act more like you would at home than you would in a strange public or semi-public place. When venting, you might be relatively oblivious to who else may be within earshot. That might include coworkers, supervisors, customers, clients, or patients. Of course the ripple effects of the lack of privacy vary and are impossible to predict, but they seem almost guaranteed to be more negative than positive. As difficult as it may be in the moment, it's worth the effort to gauge the level of privacy, especially when your voice is liable to be a bit louder due to the emotional charge behind the venting.

To Vent or Not: That Is the Question

There is no right or wrong answer. Hopefully, by considering the issues raised above, you can make decisions that increase the likelihood of beneficial venting while minimizing the risks. One entirely different option is to write or journal as a means of venting. Doing so eliminates many of the risks noted above, but lacks some of the benefits of venting in person with a supportive coworker. In the end, being self-aware and intentional in your choices is the ultimate goal.

petition in open court and seeking permission to appear and argue in person.

The review petition, filed under Article 137 of the Constitution, against the decision rendered on December 11, said that the impugned judgment should not have left open the question of whether the Parliament can extinguish the character of statehood by converting a state into one or more Union Territories.

In its verdict delivered on December 11, a Constitution Bench, headed by CJI Chandrachud had upheld the status of Ladakh as a Union Territory under Article 3(a) read with Explanation I of the Constitution, which permits the formation of a Union Territory by separating a territory from any state.

However, it did not deal with the question of whether the Parliament could extinguish the character of statehood by converting a state into one or more Union Territories.

"In view of the submission made by the Solicitor General that statehood would be restored of Jammu and Kashmir, we do not find it necessary to determine whether the reorganisation of the State of Jammu and Kashmir into two Union Territories of Ladakh and Jammu & Kashmir is permissible under Article 3," the top court had said.

Further, the SC held that the President has the power to issue a notification declaring that Article 370 ceases to exist even after the dissolution of the Constituent Assembly of Jammu and Kashmir. It added that Article 370 was a temporary provision, considering the historical context in which it was included in the Constitution of India.

In its verdict, the top court had also asked the Election Commission of India to take steps to conduct elections to the Legislative Assembly of Jammu and Kashmir by September 30, 2024.

Generally, review petitions are tested on very narrow grounds like mistakes of law, an error apparent on the face of the record, etc., and are often dismissed in chambers and are rarely given open court hearings.

The matter was taken up with the LPG marketing companies as well who have assured to the department that such complaints and any underweight distribution of LPG will be dealt with strictly as per their company policies.

Earlier, the directions were issued by Controller Legal Metrology Department J&K, Majid K.A Drabu wherein the field executives of LMD were directed to conduct the special inspection drives against LPG Dealers in terms of the provisions of the Legal Metrology Act, 2009 and LPG Regulation (Supply and Distribution Order) 2000.

Moreover, the Department has requested consumers to remain vigilant while purchasing LPG and has asked them to insist on payment receipt while receiving the delivery.

The weight is written on every LPG Cylinder and every customer should insist on checking the weight of the cylinder by using the weighing scale lying with the delivery van. Any instance of refusal for conducting the weight or overcharging by LPG delivery person may be brought into notice of the Department so that the proper legal action can be taken.

Jel Helped

BJP views the increased participation as a rejection of past governance under the Congress, regional parties like the National Conference and the PDP interpret the historic turnout as a denouncement of the Centre's policies towards Jammu and Kashmir.

The Jel, which was banned by the central government for five years in February 2019 for terror activities, played a clandestine role in mobilising voters, highly placed officials monitoring the situation said.

According to them, the role of the Jel in significantly impacting the voting dynamics in specific areas like Chicloora, Soibug, Naidkhai, Chitti Bandi, Seelu, and Qaziabad cannot be denied.

Jel was part of the separatist amalgam of Hurriyat Conference which spearheaded poll boycott campaigns after its formation in 1993.

However, the socio-religious outfit, which was said to be the parent organisation of the pro-Pakistan terror outfit Hizbul Mujahideen, remained neutral after the division of Hurriyat between moderates and hardliners in 2003.

Former Jel chief Ghulam Qadir Wani recently said his organisation will participate in assembly elections if the Centre revokes the ban imposed on the outfit.

"We are holding talks with the Centre. We want to get our ban removed and we want to play our role in society. If the ban is removed, we may take part in the elections," Wani had said.

Unlike the past when the voters mostly used to stay indoors, especially in pockets having separatist and terrorist influence like Sopore township which has not crossed single-digit voting in the past decades, the May 20 poll witnessed a completely different scene with brisk voting reported from all polling stations since the start of polling.

Baramulla district led the voting turnout with 3,93,566 voters casting their ballots followed by Kupwara (3,38,495 voters), Bandipora (1,53,006) and Budgam (1,22,569), according to the figures issued by poll officials.

In seven assembly segments of Baramulla, Uri recorded the highest 62.94 per cent turnout, followed by Pattan (60.01 per cent), Gulmarg (57.87 per cent), Rafiabad (57.38 per cent), Baramulla (52.15 per cent), Wagoora-Kreeri (49.77 per cent) and Sopore (44.21 per cent).

Similarly, in six segments of Kupwara, Handwara recorded the highest turnout of 72.04 per cent followed by Langate (63.60 per cent), Trehgam (62.56 per cent), Karnah (61.86 per cent) and Lolab (58.77 per cent).

Sonawari segment in Bandipora district was at the top with 62.32 per cent polling followed by Bandipora (59.20 per cent) and Gurez (ST) (40.81 per cent), while two segments of Budgam and Beerwah recorded 52 per cent and 58.80 per cent voting.

The polling on Monday sealed the fate of 22 candidates, including National Conference vice president and former chief minister Omar Abdullah, separatist-turned-former minister Sajad Lone and two-time former MLA and jailed Awami Ittehad Party chairman Sheikh Abdul Rashid, alias Engineer Rashid.

Abdullah attributed the high voter turnout in the constituency to the electorate's identification with his party's stance on the developments post the abrogation of Article 370 and unaddressed issues during the absence of popular governance since 2018.

PDP president Mehbooba Mufti saw the high voter turnout as an expression of Kashmiri people's discontent with the revocation of the special status of Jammu and Kashmir and the erstwhile state's reorganisation into two Union territories – highlighting a shift towards using ballots to voice dissent instead of resorting to violence.

Meanwhile, BJP leader Jahanzaib Sirwal said the record-breaking turnout in Baramulla following a notable 38 per cent polling in Srinagar, underscores a significant political awakening in the region, signalling a shift towards embracing democratic values and rejecting past misgovernance.

"We strongly commend the nearly 59 per cent turnout on the Baramulla Lok Sabha seat, which serves as a powerful endorsement by the people of Kashmir for the democratic values championed by the prime minister's visionary leadership.

"This historic turnout is a resounding rebuke to those political parties that have acted as brokers for years and a decisive rejection of Congress's disastrous policies in New Delhi," Sirwal said.

He said the turnout reflects the people's trust in the BJP's leadership and their desire for a peaceful, progressive Kashmir.

"The days of manipulation and misrule are over. Democracy has prevailed," he said, adding the people of Kashmir have spoken loud and clear, embracing democracy and rejecting the misgovernance of the past.

Sirwal said this turnout is not just evidence but an order of validation passed by the people of Kashmir for the establishment of democratic values under the leadership of Modi.

PM Hails Baramulla

with energy as voters in large numbers thronged to exercise their right to vote.

"Compliments to my sisters and brothers of Baramulla for their unbreakable commitment to democratic values. Such active participation is a great trend," Modi said in a post on X.

Modi's remarks came in response to Jammu and Kashmir Lieutenant Governor (LG) Manoj Sinha's post, saying, "High voter turnout, over 58% in Baramulla Parliamentary Constituency, is very encouraging and shows the people's determination and unwavering faith in democracy. I congratulate and thank the people of Baramulla for joining the Maha Kumbh of our democracy in large numbers."

Millions Join Iran

For Islamic Republic, mass demonstrations have been crucial since millions thronged the streets of Tehran to welcome Grand Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in 1979 following the triumph of the Islamic Revolution, and also attended his funeral 10 years later. Millions turned out in 2020 for processions for the late Revolutionary Guard Gen Qassem Soleimani, who was assassinated by the US in a drone strike in Baghdad.

Live images from Iran broadcast worldwide showed massive crowds of mourners jostling to touch coffins of the dead leaders through the streets of Tabriz city and later in Qom, the religious capital of the country.

A procession Tuesday morning led by a semi truck carrying the caskets of the dead slowly moved through the narrow streets of downtown Tabriz, the closest major city near the site of the crash Sunday. Thousands in black slowly walked beside the coffins, some throwing flowers up to them as an emcee wept through a loudspeaker for men he described as martyrs.

The caskets later arrived in Tehran to an honor guard at the airport and then went onward to the holy seminary city of Qom. There, a semi truck surrounded by soldiers in fatigues at one point was swarmed by a crowd of mourners. Some beat their chests and wailed. The truck later picked up speed while others stood alongside the road, watching.

The bodies will return to Tehran on Tuesday night for services Wednesday.

It remains unclear what international presence that funeral will draw, as Raisi faced US sanctions for his role while leading the country's judiciary in early days of revolution.

On Thursday, Raisi's hometown of Birjand will see a procession, followed by a funeral and burial at the Imam Reza shrine in the holy city of Mashhad, the only imam of the Shia faith buried in Iran.

That shrine has long been a center for pilgrims and sees millions visit each year. Over the centuries, its grounds have served as the final burial site for heroes in Persian history. It's an incredibly high, rare honor in the faith.

Iranian President Mohammad-Ali Rajai, the only other president to die in office when he was killed in a 1981 bombing, was buried in Tehran.

No cause has yet been offered by Iran's government for the crash, which took place in a foggy mountain range in a decades-old helicopter. Iranian presidents including Ahmadinejad and Abolhasan Baniisadr both survived their own helicopter crashes while in office.

Iran's military, not its civil aviation authority, will investigate and later offer a report, authorities say.

Meanwhile Tuesday, Iran's new Assembly of Experts opened its first session after an election that decided the new assembly, a panel of which both Raisi and the late Tabriz Friday leader Mohammad Ali Ale-Heshem were members. A flower-ringed portrait sat on the seat Raisi would have occupied at the meeting of the 88-member panel, which is tasked with selecting the country's next supreme leader. Also attending was Iran's acting President Mohammad Mokhtbar.

The death of the foreign minister, Amir Abdollahian, also disrupts Iran's recent flurry of diplomacy with regional Arab countries to forge closer ties, manage the wider conflict with Israel and conduct indirect talks with the United States.

Mourning Continues

slogans and appreciated the role of Raesi in raising Palestinian issue and defending the chastity of the Quran at the UN General Assembly last year.

"The Muslim world is sad about the death of a religious scholar. He was more than a President of a country but enemies should know that others will follow the way shown by our leader", Said Tahira Najma, a mourner.

Afreena Ajiaz, another mourner said that she is part of the mourning event to pay tributes to the late leader.

"We are here to pay tributes to the Raesi who died serving his fellow humans"

Meanwhile, many Majalis were organized to pay tributes to the later leader. Mourners participating in the day-long majlis and processions were reaffirming their faith and devotion towards the late President.

Earlier on Monday, many people in central and north Kashmir displayed their grief by hoisting black flags and banners. Mourning processions were held in Srinagar, Pattan and Budgam beside Ladakh to mourn the death of the Iranian leaders.

It is pertinent to mention, the helicopter crash of Iran's President comes as the Middle East remains on edge from the devastating Israeli war on Gaza resulting in an unprecedented Iranian attack on Israel just last month. Under President Raisi, Iran began building ties with neighboring Arab countries besides strengthening resistance against the US-Israeli alliance in the region.

Iran's military has ordered a probe into the cause of the crash. Former Iranian Foreign Minister Zarif has blamed US sanctions for the crash.

HC Asks Govt

fundamental right, getting due to every employee for the service rendered against it, feels that denying such benefit to the petitioners, obviously, is bound to cause great inconvenience and prejudice to their rights."

One thing is clear that the authorities do not at all dispute the entitlement of the petitioners to receive either the arrears of COLA, leave salary or gratuity. But the only dispute is with regard to the inability of the Corporation to pay the same, the court noted.

"It is said that the Corporation is financially dependent wholly on the support of the Government extended to it from time to time and, therefore, the Government ought to be directed to provide the amount, which is payable to the petitioners," the court said and subsequently directed the Corporation to calculate the amount within a period of four weeks positively, and forward a proposal, seeking financial assistance, to the Government.

"...it is made clear that, whatever, amount is calculated as arrears by the respondent-Corporation shall be provided by the Government under a separate "Head". The said amount shall be made available in addition to the wages bill, which generally is provided by the Government to the Corporation," the court said.

High-Profile Committee

The court also directed them to suggest remedial measures including setting up of waste processing facilities to zero down landfill and submit the report before the Tribunal within eight weeks.

The committee comprises representatives from the Central Pollution Control Board (CPCB), the National Wetland Committee of the Ministry of Environment, Forest and Climate Change (MoEF&CC), the Deputy Commissioner of Srinagar, and the Member Secretary of the J&K Pollution Control Committee (JKPCC). The Deputy Commissioner of Srinagar will serve as the nodal agency, as per the order.

In his petition, Dr. Bhat, through his counsel Advocate Itisha Awasthi, has raised the grievance against "illegal and unscientific" dumping of municipal solid, bio-medical and plastic waste at the Achan landfill site.

As per the disclosure the said landfill site is the only dumping ground in the city of Srinagar and adjoining area.

"It has been pointed out by the learned counsel for the applicant that a canal passes by the side of landfill and it joins the Achan lake which ultimately forms part of the Dal Lake," Bhat submitted.

He further pleaded that almost 450 metric tons of waste is dumped every day at landfill site, which is spread over an area of 75 acres and which is located in close proximity to human habitation.

Bhat claims that dumping of waste at the landfill site is done in violation of Solid Waste Management Rule, 2016, the timeline set in the Action Plan for Municipal Solid Waste Management, Jammu and Kashmir, 2018, the Bio-Medical Waste Management Rules, 2016, and the Plastic Waste Management Rules, 2016.

Notably, as per Bhat, NGT has passed several orders earlier in 2015 and 2017 but they weren't implemented in letter and spirit.

The next date of hearing has been set for 30 August 2024.

Abdullah, who is a candidate for the Baramulla Lok Sabha seat, did not agree with the claims made by the BJP top brass that the record turnout was due to abrogation of Article 370 by the Centre in 2019.

"We know how good the situation is. What happened in Shopian and Pahalgaon two days earlier tells us how good the situation is.

"People showed courage to use their right to vote. The Centre does not get any credit for it. If they want to link it to Article 370 (abrogation), they will have to answer why the turnout was higher in the elections held before 1990," the NC vice president told reporters at NC headquarters here.
